4-Year Draft Extension Is Sought By Eisenhower

Taxpayer Said Willing To Shell Out For Roads

Louisiana Governor Says Citizens Can See 'Something For Money'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gov. Robert F. Kennon of Louisiana told a highway conference today taxpayers will shell out money for road construction 'less grudgingly'' than for any other purpose.

The taxpayer is convinced he is really getting "something for his money" when roads are built, Kennon told a national conference on highway financing sponsored by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, head of the advisory committee which recommended to President Eisenhower a $101-billion federal-state highway program this week, was another scheduled speaker.

The Clay committee called for a new $27 billion program that would develop a 40,000-mile network of interstate highways over the next 10 years. All but $2 billion would be provided by the federal government through a bond-issuing federal highway corporation.

AS HEAD OF the Governors' Council, Kennon delivered to Eisenhower last month a report from the nation's governors which embodied many of the proposals set forth by the Clay committee.

Kennon said he didn't think construction of toll roads would meet the problem.

A study of the situation in Louisiana showed, he said, "that only in a few instances would a toll road be a paying proposition."

Meanwhile, in New Orleans, Sen. Case (R-SD) said there are two ways to keep a proposed interstate highway system from curtail-

Teamplay Speeds Planning On Lake

Smooth and steady progress in planning for a fishing lake a short distance east of Circleville was reported Wednesday night after a meeting of the Pickaway County Farmers and Sportsmen's Association.

Bob Wolf, secretary of the association, disclosed that details of the project have been falling into place with a high degree of coordination among all concerned. The smooth teamplay now established is in sharp contrast to the prolonged controversy that stalled the work over a period of years.

Next step, it was explained, will be to determine the subsoil in accordance with revised blueprints.

After long debate over the size of lake possible within the range of funds available, plans were drawn for a lake with a water area covering 125 acres.

WHEN THE state obtains the subsoil data, it will then be apparent whether a few more acres will have to be purchased from Dewey Black. Black owns property on the edge of the land already purchased by the state and is regarded as one of the leading boosters for completion of the lake.

As soon as weather permits, heavy equipment can be moved across his property to speed up the work.

Outstanding among the bright prospects for the lake was the complete harmony on all sides as the project continues to take form.

Following the meeting by the sportsmen's group, Wolf praised the efforts being made by Ohio Department of Natural Resources Director A. W. Marion. "I know for a positive fact," Wolf said, "that Mr. Marion is doing everything within his power and authority to complete the lake as soon as possible. And that should be good news for all of us.

"As soon as the weather clears sufficiently, work with the heavier equipment will begin. Meanwhile, many of the paper details and preliminary transactions are being handled to clear the decks.

"At one time, over a number of years, there was a great deal of controversy connected with the job. But now there is no friction whatsoever.

"EVERYBODY is moving ahead on the best possible schedule, and we want the people of Pickaway County to know it."

Wednesday night's meeting of the sportsmen's association was the first held under the leadership of Al Gabriel, new president of the organization. The association has spearheaded efforts to have the fishing lake completed.

Drivers Urged To Be Careful; Highways Icy

Motorists have been advised to use caution when traveling in the county due to icy road conditions.

Most of the main roads have been cleared but there are a number of slippery areas. Ice has formed underneath some of the snow, making driving hazardous in spots.

Trucks of the state and county highway departments in Circleville have been out since midnight Wednesday. Salt. calcium chloride and sand have been spread.

City streets were slippery earlier but are now in better condition.

SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES report that snow drifting across the roads has made driving conditions difficult in some areas. They report only one minor accident since the snow began to fall. There were no injuries.

Route 23 north and south and Route 22 east and west are in "fair" condition. Heavy traffic on these routes has worked out most of the snow and ice. But more snow is predicted for the area. Authorities here urge extreme driving caution.

Air Force Lauds Ohio Congressman

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. William E. Hess (R-Ohio) yesterday was thanked by the Air Force for investigations that turned up a personnel problem in the General Electric plant at Evendale, Ohio.

Harold E. Talbott, secretary of the Air Force, wrote Hess that as chairman of the House Defense Activities Subcommittee in the last Congress, he had helped correct a problem "conducive of low morale, dissension and unrest."

Hess' inquiry was into the firing of two men he said helped expose an officer who later pleaded guilty to embezzlement. The two were later reinstated.

Hammarskjold Heading For U. N. Offices

RENO (AP)—U. N. Secretary Dag Hammarskjold arrived today from his mission to free 11 American airmen in Red China and stayed in bed during a brief plane refuelling stop here.

The big silver Super Constellation landed at 5:14 a. m. His personal aide William Rannalo told newsmen: "You're out of luck, boys—he's staying in bed. He's very tired."

Hammarskjold presisently has refused any comment on his talks with Chou En-lai, Red China's Premier and foreign minister, on the fate of the 11 Americans and other U.N. prisoners.

Rannalo said he doubted that Hammarskjold would report to the U. N. today.

The plane stopped briefly at Stead Air Force Base here before continuing to New York.

Hammarskjold has maintained a stony silence on the outcome of his mission at every point since he emerged from behind the Bamboo Curtain—at Hong Kong, Tokyo and Honolulu, which he left last night wearing a pink sunburn from an afternoon on the beach.

AT EACH STOP on his return flight Hammarskjold has made clear that he would have nothing to say until he reported to the U.N. General Assembly, which sent him to seek freedom for 11 U. S. airmen jailed as "spies." The airmen were captured in the Korean War.

Hammarskjold met four times in Peiping with Chou and other Communist officials. In Washington, the State Department said it is completely in the dark on the substance of Hammarskjold's efforts.

But Senate GOP Leader Knowland said, "I think the Reds may be trying to get us into another prolonged Panmunjom which may drag on for years. The test is whether these men are released and they haven't been."

Toledoan, 18, Sentenced To Die

A panel of three judges yesterday found him guilty of first-degree murder in the woodland slaying near here last Aug. 12. The judges deliberated one hour.

The youth testified he raped the girl in a woods near her home after a 12-year-old boy companion had knocked her unconscious with a club. He said he stabbed her when she regained consciousness.

REA Costs Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rural Electrification Administration said today there was a 5 per cent drop in 1954 in the unit cost of electrical power furnished residential users by rural power concerns which it financed. The cost averaged 3.06 cents a kilowatt hour.

No Guarantee Seen Chiang Won't Involve U S. In War

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Sparkman (D-Ala) said today there is no way to spell out "100 per cent insurance" that Chiang Kai-shek will not seek to involve this country in war by provoking a Communist attack, but that he regards a note signed Dec. 10 as a "promise" from Chiang.

He referred to a note signed by Secretary of State Dulles and Chinese Nationalist Premier George K. C. Yeh, pledging the United States and Chiang's forces not to launch in the Formosa area without "joint agreement" any military actions not strictly self-defensive.

The note was signed eight days after the new U.S.-Formosa Mutual Defense Treaty. Sparkman said he regards it as the best guarantee possible that the pact would not involve this nation in a war over Formosa, the island 100 miles off China which constitutes most of Chiang's Republic of China.

Sparkman commented in advance of a closed-door session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee called to hear a briefing on the situation by Dulles.

It was Dulles' first date with a Democratic - controlled congressional group, but Sparkman, a member, said the secretary would get "a friendlier reception than he's been getting from a Republican-controlled committee."

The U.S.-Formosa treaty commits this country to "act to meet the common danger" in the event of any armed attack on Formosa or the nearby Pescadores Islands and to recognize such an attack as dangerous to U. S. peace."

The actual language of the note signed by Dulles and Yeh was not made public at the time of its signing, but it has been furnished to the Senate for use in connection with its consideration of the treaty.

This is the key language:

"In view of the obligations of the two parties . . . and of the fact that the use of force from either of these areas by either of the parties affects the other, it is agreed that such use of force will be a matter of joint agreement, subject to action of an emergency character which is clearly an exercise of the inherent right of self-defense."

The areas referred to are Formosa and the Pescadores, specifically included in the treaty, and other islands such as the Tachens which are not included.

Pay Increases For 'Career' Men Requested

Powerful Military Reserve Also Labeled As 'Must' For U. S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower today asked Congress to extend the draft law four years, grant pay increases to "career" servicemen and create a powerful military reserve to deal with any "aggressor so criminally unwise as to attempt an atomic attack."

The President set out the administration's military manpower program in two special messages to the lawmakers, saying the measures he proposed would give this country the "proper military posture" for the first time in peacetime.

On pay, he proposed increases only for men willing to serve longer than a minimum time, saying it is necessary to maintain "the experienced hard core of a modern fighting force."

Calling for a "selective" 'rise, Eisenhower said there should be no increase for officers in the first three years of their service and none in the first two years for enlisted men.

This would mean no pay rise for two-year draftees or for young reserve officers putting in only their obligated time.

THE PRESIDENT said the aggregate increase he proposed would hike the present service payroll by about 6.7 per cent for salary and allowances.

At present the government is paying out about $10 billion for those purposes. On that basis, the added cost would be about $705 million a year.

Eisenhower devoted one message of 1,800 words to the pay question and a second of 2,000 words to his

Commissioners OK Temporary Appropriations

Pickaway County commissioners announced Thursday that temporary appropriations have been passed to meet current bills and salaries through the first quarter of 1955.

They said the action was necessary because data on estimated revenue for 1955 has not as yet been compiled for the commission. The data is expected shortly, but the commission held a special meeting to pass the temporary appropriations Wednesday because of the approaching Saturday pay day, it was explained.

The commissioners said not all of the anticipated expenditures are covered by the temporary appropriations passed thus far, but that no serious difficulty was expected in allocating funds to cover all the county's needs for the first quarter.

The action taken Wednesday—plus the steps remaining to be completed—would provide needed funds up to April 1.

In connection with the commission's action, it was pointed out that the question of salary increases for any county branches will have to wait until the end of the first quarter. The commissioners declined to say what, if any, pay hikes would be considered at that time.

Most Of Weather Today: Cold, Dry

CHICAGO (AP) — Cold and dry weather prevailed over most of the United States today.

Cold Canadian air dropped temperatures from 5 to 20 degrees from the Dakotas and Minnesota southward to northern Texas. The cold weather extended eastward into Wisconsin and Illinois.

Temperatures were between zero and 10 degrees below zero in the Northern Plains. But it was colder from the upland valleys of the central Rockies. One of the lowest readings early today was 20 below at Fraser, Colo., high up in the Rockies.

Polio Defeated By New Mother

ATHENS, Ohio (AP)—Last September, Mrs. Richard Glover, 39, mother of two children and expecting a third, was stricken with bulbar polio, the type that often is fatal.

Today, she presented her school bus driver husband a son.

Attending physicians said she has recovered completely from the bout with polio. Her son is healthy and the birth was normal.

Man Shuns Bank; Thug Gets $3870

CLEVELAND (AP)—Lorenz Mljac, 73-year-old city gardener who says he does not believe in banks, is out $3,870.

He told police a thief entered his home Tuesday and took $3,435 he hid in his refrigerator and another $435 he kept in a night stand.

Mljac waited until yesterday, he said, to notify detectives of the theft because he was hunting his .32 caliber revolver. But he found that gone too.

CLEVELAND (AP)—Funeral services will be held Saturday for the Rev. William Louis Seith, a minister of the Evangelical United Brethren Church for 61 years. He died Tuesday while visiting in East Liberty.

Block Of Dimes Has $425 Goal For Saturday

Circleville's contribution to the campaign to fight polio will be increased by at least $425 if the city's sixth annual Block of Dimes reaches its 1955 goal.

The local fund-raising event will start at noon on Saturday at Court and Main Streets, sponsored by the Circleville American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps.

The corps has raised nearly $2,100 in the previous five years. In 1953 the Legionnaires hit their high mark of $629.25.

Corps members will "hawk" for money in any way, shape or form. Any coins given will be placed on the sidewalk end to end going west on W. Main St. When they reach the first alley, they will reverse direction and keep on repeating this method.

ANYONE WISHING to contribute a dollar bill will "purchase" a block one foot long. The donor's name will be written on the pavement.

All the money collected will be turned over to the March of Dimes and be credited accordingly. The event will last until 9 p. m.

Corps members hope that the recently fallen snow will melt enough by Saturday noon so as not to interfer with the event.

Fields Say They Prefer Life Of Reds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Noel Field has notified the State Department he and his wife have decided to forsake the United States and remain in Communist Hungary, which imprisoned them for five years.

Field's decision, not unexpected by the State Department, was relayed in a handwritten letter received two days ago at Budapest by U. S. Minister Christian M. Ravndal. The letter was disclosed last night by Department Press Officer Henry Suydam.

But officials fully expect Noel's brother Hermann to come home again. Hermann, 44, was freed by Communist Poland late in October. He too had served five years in a Red prison. He was issued a U.S. passport and is recuperating in Switzerland. A Cleveland architect, he ran afoul of the Communists in Warsaw while hunting Noel.

Noel, 50, is a controversial figure on both sides of the Iron Curtain. He has been accused by the Reds of being a spy and in Washington hearings as being a consort of Communists.

Reds in Eastern Europe accused Noel of being an American agent, but these charges were washed out when he and his wife Herta were freed last Nov. 17.

Presbyterian Merger Hits Snag In South

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The chances of a merger of the three United States branches of the Presbyterian Church appeared somewhat dim today as the result of opposition from the South.

The union would unite the three groups now in the process of voting on the proposal, the United Presbyterian Church, the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. and the Presbyterian Church in the United States (Southern). They have a membersdip of 3 million.

Unanimous approval of the three is necessary.

The Southern branch and the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. separated in 1860 as a result of the Civil War. Basic cause for the division was over the slavery issue.

Thirteen Southern presbyteries have voted on the merger issue and 12 have opposed it. A three-quarter majority of the 84 presbyteries in the Southern branch is necessary for the group's approval.

Only ten more negative votes are thus needed among the Southern presbyteries to kill the plan and one of their leaders said, "We will get those in the next two weeks."

Meanwhile, in Philadelphia, Dr. Walton Rankin, publicity manager of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. said 40 out of 256 presbyteries of his branch had voted for union. He said he has received no reports of any presbyteries in his branch that voted "no."

Survivors include his son, widow and two daughters, Mrs. Willard Witte of Fort Wayne and Mrs. Peter Oberman of San Diego, Calif.

French Chief Plans Talks In Germany

ROME (AP) — French Premier Pierre Mendes-France leaves today for a visit to West Germany and talks with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer on postwar French-German differences. The energetic premier carries with him partial Italian support for his controversial European arms pool plan.

During two days of talks here with Premier Mario Scelba and other Italian leaders, the French premier won agreement-in-principle for his plan to set up a seven-nation agency to control arms output and distribution within the projected Western European Union. The two nations also announced accords on several ecogomic questions, involving trade, industrial cooperation and immigration.

Despite the promise of partial support, Mendes - France reportedly was disappointed in the reception given the arms pool plan by Italian leaders. Sources indicated he had hoped for more enthusiastic backing, which might aid him in getting an OK from a less receptive West Germany.

The plan, designed to prevent West Germany from overarming within the WEU, comes up next Monday before a meeting in Paris of the seven nations which signed the still-unratified WEU treaty. In addition to France, Italy and West Germany, they include the Netherlands, Britain, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Mother Testifies Against Man, 25

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jesse McWhorter, 25, whose mother testified against him, was convicted in U. S. District Court yesterday of bank robbery and was sentenced by Judge John H. Druffel to 20 years in prison.

McWhorter was charged with the $596 holdup of the Hewitt-Woodburn Savings and Loan Co. here last Sept. 15.

After the verdict was returned, Judge Druffel told the jury the man's mother did not want to testify against him but that she feared he might kill someone.

Bridge Abutment Believed Bombed

PORTSMOUTH (AP) — Recent explosions heard by residents of Eifort, a small community on the Lawrence-Scioto county line, may have been caused by an attempt to dynamite a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad bridge abutment.

P. P. Glenn, a detective for the railroad, and deputy sheriffs have been investigating the blasts. Glenn said he had found a hole about two and a half feet in diameter at the base of one abutment of a trestle over the Little Scioto River, and that it appeared to have been caused by a dynamite explosion. He said there were signs the dynamite had been placed there.

Boys Smart, But Not For Very Long

CHILLICOTHE (AP)—A couple of boys, 12 and 14, walked off the bridge between the county jail and the Ross County courthouse. The older one asked the court stenographer: "Is the judge in?"

Arthur Clum, the stenographer, directed them to the office of Common Pleas Judge Howard Goldsberry.

"Judge Stevens?" inquired the older boy again.

"He's downstairs — last office on the right," said Judge Goldsberry. So, off the boys trotted.

That's the way two youngsters accused of petit larceny escaped from the juvenile detention room. But with the aid of their parents, they were rounded up quickly.

GOP Senators Certain Ike To Run; Democrats Disagree

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several Republican senators said today they think President Eisenhower is reluctant to run for reelection but will be convinced he ought to before the 1956 GOP convention.

Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) on the other hand, said he is betting Eisenhower will retire. But Sen. Humphrey (D-Minn) said it is "far too early to speculate."

Monroney, who said he had won five hats betting former President Truman would not run again in 1952, said he is basing his predictions on reports that Mrs. Eisenhower doesn't want the President to be a candidate again.

"Mrs. Truman didn't want President Truman to run and he didn't," Monroney said. "I don't think Mrs. Eisenhower wants President Eisenhower to run and I'm betting that he won't."

Eisenhower was again noncommittal when asked at his news conference yesterday about his plans for 1956.

SENATORS Carlson (R-Kan) and Bender (R-Ohio), who call themselves staunch Eisenhower supporers, said they don't have any doubt the President will be the party's standardbearer in 1956.

Sen. Watkins (R-Utah) said, 'I don't think he wants it, but I think he'll be the nominee."

Senators Allott (R-Colo) and Clifford Case (R-NJ), elected last November with the President's active support, said they assume Eisenhower is going to run and will have no GOP opposition.

Eisenhower told newsmen he hopes he never becomes sufficiently selfcentered that he fails to respond to a call to duty. But he said the individual involved has to decide for himself just where his duty lies.

ing construction of needed primary, secondary and urban roads.

Describing problems faced by the President's Highway Advisory Committee, Case told the American Road Builders Assn. that "one big one will be to demonstrate that the completion of the interstate system will not delay or interfere with the building of the badly needed roads that are not a part of the interstate system.

There are two answers to this question.

"First, that relieving the states of matching on the interstate will release funds for construction of other systems.

"Second, that the reimbursement for funds already spent on the interstate system will make possible some 'lieu' road in neglected sections."

Case said Eisenhower's proposed $101 billion interstate system can fit into a framework set up by 1954 Federal Aid Act. The road builders end their convention today with election of officers.

Judge Labels New Federal Tax Form As 'Atrocious'

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Circuit Judge Dale Souter says he has come face to face with the most perplexing problem of his career—the new income tax form.

The form so vexed the judge that he wrote a letter of objection to Rep. Ford (R-Mich), Sen. Potter (R-Mich) and Sen. McNamara (D-Mich).

The judge wrote that he thought the income tax statement forms are "to say the least, atrocious."

"It seems the Congress certainly should be able to find the necessary personnel to prepare a form that the ordinary taxpayer can understand and fill out himself without paying an expert to interpret it for him," Judge Souter stated.

He said he has completed his return but added he now is seeking an accountant to verify it.

Speeding Motorist Perils Lives, But Other Faults Also Take Toll

Recalling Ohio's poor showing in the nation's highway death over the year-end holidays, safety leaders in Pickaway County and elsewhere have returned their criticism of speeding motorists.

But one of the country's biggest insurance companies warns that other driving faults can be as dangerous. Two-thirds of the nation's fatal traffic accidents occur at legal or slower speeds, according to the firm's family economics bureau.

Exceeding the speed limit was involved in one of every six fatal accidents in 1953. "Driving too fast for the circumstances but without exceeding a posted limit" accounted for another one-sixth of all fatal accidents. Thus, traveling at 20 miles an hour through a situation where you should creep at five or ten can be as dangerous as doing 80 on the open highway, the insurance people point out, and is just as illegal in most areas.

Reckless speed kills thousands, and must be curbed, says the insurance firm's warning. But the "hoggish driving" group of offenses-ignoring traffic controls, etc. -accounted for approximately 22 per cent of the fatal accidents in 1953, considerably more than were due to breaking a speed limit.

WHILE "DRUNK" driving was charged up in only six per cent of fatal accidents, another 12 per cent of drivers involved in fatal accidents had been drinking to some extent. Safety officials agree that many of these additional tragedies undoubtedly would not have occurred had driver reactions not been slowed or overconfidence not been boosted by even modest amounts of alcohol, causing other driving offenses to be committed.

Improper passing, following too closely and miscellaneous wrong driving practices were involved in some 15 per cent of fatal accidents. All of the above figures are based on the averages of 150 cities and 22 states reporting to the National Safety Council, the insurance company emphasizes.

Advent of radar is making speed limit violations still easier to detect and convict. To discourage various other equally dangerous offenses is often much more difficult, and deserve full public attention and support, the insurance firm urges.

Unmarked patrol cars have made undermanned police forces much more effective in detecting and discouraging dangerous driver offenses. Motion picture cameras offer a promising new scientific weapon for "nailing" many bad violations. The knowledge that such gadgets are on the prowl in unmarked cars provides powerful deterrent to the reckless or hoggish driver.

Systematic programs of spot-checking passing motorists for liquor symptoms and missing licenses have proven so effective in reducing drinks before driving that much pressure generally has to be withstood from hard-hit bars and from thirsty but uneasy motorists, the insurance company says.

"Drunkometer" equipment has made detection and conviction of drunk drivers surer and easier, but its use as court evidence has yet to be established by law in a number of localities.

WORKHOUSE sentences, even very brief ones, dealt out rigidly to first offenders in the dangerous violation groups, have brought striking reductions in traffic casualties in various communities.

Widespread publicity given by press, radio and television has multiplied the effects of safety-law enforcement campaigns, says the insurance company's report. When such publicity slackens, results usually decline sharply, even though authorities continue the drive without abatement.

Township Officials Set For Convention

Intensive training in township government will be given trustees and clerks when the Ohio State Association of Township Trustees and Clerks holds its 27th Annual Convention in Columbus, beginning next Thursday. About 1,750 public officials are expected to attend the two and a half day schooling, according to State Secretary Charles P. Baker Jr., of Painesville.

In addition to question and answer forums conducted by a state examiner from the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, there will be panel discussions and short talks by selected members of the organization. Subjects to be given special attention are roads, township clerks, fire departments, annexation and incorporation, cemeteries, new township buildings and zoning.

Dean Clarence Manion of South Bend, Indiana, noted speaker on Americanism, will address the convention Friday afternoon.

Other speakers will include:

Robert F. Eastman, president of the County Engineers' Association; Fred J. Milligan, Columbus attorney, Troy Kost, secretary of the Illinois Township Officials; Dr. William B. Guitteau, historian and author, and Mack Sauer, Leesburg editor and humorist. State officials, in addition to the governor, will include Attorney General C. William O'Neill, State Auditor James A. Rhodes, State Fire Marshall Charles R. Scott and Roger Cloud, speaker of the House of Representatives.

SUPREME COURT Judge James Garfield Stewart will speak at the Old Timers Luncheon Thursday noon and Chief Justice Carl V. Weygandt will address the annual banquet Thursday evening.

Prior to formal opening of the convention, county association presidents and secretaries will hold a dinner meeting Wednesday evening. C. V. Neal is association president for Pickaway County, and Bill Goode serves as county association secretary.

Chief State Fair Demand Said Farm Machinery Show

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Visitors to the Ohio State Fair have demanded: "Bring back the farm machinery."

So says Dr. Harold Capener, rural sociologist at Ohio State University, who last night made public a survey of fair visitors last fall. The call for more farm machinery exhibits was greatest, he said.

The report was presented today to the Ohio Fair Managers Assn., which ends its three - day conference here today.

Earlier in the week, the Columbus Tractor Club, which represents most of the major farm machinery manufacturers and distributors, announced it would again pass up the Ohio State Fair this year.

The group has been dissatisfied with the amount of display space made available for farm machinery. Fair officials had offered to consult with club members and provide what space was available.

The state fair report and selection of the best 1954 fair top today's final events. About 1,000 delegates are attending.

A. L. Sorensen, Ohio's director of agriculture, and State Fair Manager Sam Cashman cooperated in the fair survey. Dr. Capener said 845 adults were interviewed.

Yesterday the delegates settled down to a series of group conferences, highlighted by discussion of possible lowering of county fair admission prices.

No action was taken. Some advocated cutting prices to 25 cents and other suggestions called for elimination of admission costs.

Delegates today choose from among 16 counties and one city entered in competition as best 1954 fair.

They include:

Division A—Richland, Muskingum and Cuyahoga; Division B—Darke, Crawford, Hancock, Knox and Wood; Division C — Ashland, Champaign, Hardin, Shelby and Williams; Division D — Morgan, Wyandot and Plain City, independent.

Dr. Capener's report cautioned that his findings on the state fair, termed in the report "the big show window," would not necessarily apply to county fairs.

Sidewalk Clerics Irk Innkeeper

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A churchgoing tavern operator complained yesterday to the City Council that sidewalk preachers are harming business.

Ministerial students persist in preaching sermons in front of her tavern door, Mrs. M. E. Johnson said. Customers, whether or not they're swayed by the Gospel, can hardly push past the preachers, she said.

Mrs. Johnson said she was a church member herself, but added that she did not think the churches should interfere with her business.

City Atty. Rhinehart Rouer said he believed police could order the preachers away from Mrs. Johnson's tavern door.

Latin-American Nations Seek Peace In Costa Rica

SAN JOSE Costa Rica (AP)—The United States and her Latin-American neighbors stepped up peacemaking efforts today in the wake of spreading fighting and widespread small air attacks in Costa Rica.

The State Department announced in Washington it was immediately ordering U. S. planes to the battle area to make "pacific observation flights" requested by the Organization of American States. The OAS hoped such flights would halt air raids on Costa Rican towns.

A five-nation commission from the OAS was due in San Jose today from Panama for an on-the-spot investigation of the outbreak in northern Costa Rica, which Costa Rican President Jose Figueres blamed on exiles and "mercenaries" trained and equipped in neighboring Nicaragua.

HE SAID HE had ordered all rebels crossing his borders disarmed and all Costa Ricans in the country rounded up.

Somoza also challenged Figueres to meet him at the border and settle their long-time feud with a duel between the two of them.

"Somoza must be mad," a source close to the Costa Rican president commented in San Jose.

Fighting flared at half a dozen points yesterday and planes strafed nine towns including the capital. Unofficial estimates placed the rebel force at 400 men.

The towns of Pensas, Blanca and the small port of Puerty Soley all near the Nicaraguan border, were reported in enemy hands, but the general staff voiced confidence it could handle the situation.

The staff said a lone fighter San Jose, machinegunning buildings near the president's residence. No casualties were reported. The civil guard said the plane, a World War II P47 described as "a Venezuelan plane which came from Nicaragua," was reported shot down as it headed north.

Air Crash Being Probed For Cause

BURLINTON, Ky. (AP)—Twisted, shattered wreckage and airport records were all that remained today to possibly explain how 15 persons died yesterday in an airplane collision only a couple of miles from the busy Greater Cincinnati Airport.

A TWA airliner, a Martin Skyliner, bound from Cincinnati to Dayton and Cleveland, collided with a privately owned DC3. Thirteen persons, including three crew members, were killed on the airliner. Two others died as the DC3 plunged to earth.

The planes crashed on snow-covered hillsides along the Ohio River, about a half mile apart. There were no survivors.

Almost 12 hours after the accident, Lewis Reinbold of Pittsburgh aviation safety agent for the Civil Aeronautics Administration, issued a statement that the pilot of the DC3 "did not file a flight plan or make any contact with the CAA's facilities en route."

An investigation was being continued today.

Reinbold said the TWA plane made a normal takeoff and was reported to be flying on instruments in the overcast.

The DC3 was en route to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., from Battle Creek, Mich., with Arthur Werkhaven, Sturgis, Mich., as the pilot and Edward Agner, Battle Creek, as copilot.

Captain of the TWA plane was J. W. Quinn, Belleville, Mich. The first officer was Robert K. Childress, Ann Arbor, Mich.

He said extension of the Selective Service law, due to expire June 30, "is necessary because experience demonstrates that active armed forces of the size we must maintain cannot be raised by voluntary enlistments alone."

He said too an effective reserve program to provide a pool of trained fighting men is necessary because:

"We cannot possibly keep armed and in uniform the total forces that might ultimately be required in an all-out war. The inescapable burdens would endanger the liberties and the economic system we are determined to defend."

The draft extension and the plan to build up a ready reserve of civilians would require some form of active duty or military training for virtually all young men.

BEFORE REACHING 19, or in some cases before the 20th birthday, a youth would have a variety of choices:

1. He could volunteer for the service of his choice, serving three years as a regular in the Army or Marine Corps, or four years in the Navy or the Air Force. His total military obligation including reserve service would be eight years.

2. He could volunteer to take six months of intensive military training, and thereafter remain active in the National Guard or reserve for an additional 9½ years. He still could be drafted if he failed to maintain his standing in the Guard or reserves.

3. He could, before reaching 19, enter the reserves direct under a commitment to go on full active duty, when called, for at least 24 months in the Navy or four years in the Air Force.

4. He could wait until he is drafted for 24 months, after which he would remain in the reserves for six years.

Hal Boyle Says:

Gamblers Are Interesting

By SAUL PETT
(For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK (AP)—You meet so many interesting people in a gambling house, and not all of them cost you money.

The most fascinating, I think, are the shills, those delightful Barrymores of dice, roulette, blackjack or whatever game happens to be dragging and needs a shot in the arm.

As you may know, shills are the genial fakers who are paid to drum up trade by playing with the house's money, to appear to be having the time of their lives in the hope that their thrills will prove contagious.

On a recent trip to Puerto Rico, where gambling is legal, I studied the shills. You understand, of course, that the only reason I went to the casinos was to gather material for a news column.

Shills are easy to recognize. They open and close the joint. When they run out of chips, they retire to the men's room, smoke a cigarette, and somehow always return with another (or maybe the same) $20 bill for fresh chips.

When they win, their eyes flash with triumph, and their chips are piled up prominently in front of them. When they lose, their eyes darken, but never into the blackness of real despair because, after all, despair is contagious.

The kindly old banker always wore an understanding expression. As you paid for chips, his eyes seemed to wish you luck. When you lost, he looked sad but, still, encouraging. Always encouraging. When you won, he beamed. He couldn't have been more delighted that you were taking is dough.

Among the players, I noticed several types.

There was the young couple just of the cruise ship. She seemed taut and breathless. He tried his best to be casual, but his hand shook. She stood close to him. He rolled the dice, made two or three passes and you could see her tugging mentally at his elbow. But his sense of man-of-the-worldliness wouldn't let him leave. Not until he lost.

Then there was the middle-aged drinker who appeared drunker than he was. When the dice came his way, he turned to a woman he didn't know and with great flourish invited her to shoot for him.

This, I guess, was supposed to indicate he didn't care what happened to his money. Anyway, the sight of a fresh woman rolling with somebody else's dough seemed to give the other players new hope. Many bet on her.

She won at first, and then lost. And as she lost, the drinker became less drunk, less flamboyant, less cavalier.

Then there was the timid, guilt-ridden amateur. When he won, he looked apologetic, as if he were stealing the money. When he won, he looked apprehensive, as though three Chicago gunmen were waiting outside for him. When he lost, he seemed to be looking over his shoulder, as though he were playing with his boss' money.

There was the tight-lipped, belligerent skeptic. Every time his turn came, he growled for fresh dice. I doubt he would know loaded dice from kippered herring. Anyway, fresh dice didn't seem to help, either.

Finally there was the student. For one entire night, he stood by without playing. Just made notes. This was the system player, bubbling with conspiracy. He played the next night. The advantage of a system, as I observed during considerable research, is that with a system it may take you longer to lose, but you lose.

Pockets: Girl's Best Friend According To Top Fashions

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Pockets are a girl's best friend, say two fashion designers whose ideas change the look of American women's clothes each season.

They are Adele Simpson and Mollie Parnis, both of whom previewed their spring collections on the opening day of New York's current week of showing for the visiting fashion press.

A woman needs pockets for change, cigarettes, handkerchiefs, glasses, lipstick and shopping lists. But up to now most high-style fashions have ignored this basic need.

Mrs. Simpson and Miss Parnis, however, are correcting the situation this spring. Both show pockets of all sizes, shapes and descriptions on their new spring fashions. As the diminutive Mrs. Simpson remarks:

"This is an age of pockets. In order to look well, women must feel comfortable and easy in their clothes. They like to stand with hands in pockets, they like to have pockets in which to carry small belongings that get lost in the bottom of a handbag. They want and need functional clothes for ease of living—skirts with room for walking or for getting in and out of taxicabs, suits that turn into cocktail or restaurant dresses with the removal of the jacket—and enough pockets to hold their minor accessories."

Miss Parnis, favorite designer of Mrs. Eisenhower, shows envelope pockets on smooth, wearable, understated shirtwaist dresses for spring, and recommends the shirtwaist outfit for every hour of the day. She explains:

"Women don't want to look overdressed or regimented. They want clothes that make them feel good, and that don't have a lot of gadgets and trimmings that need constant adjustment. They want to look smooth, well-put-together and contemporary, but never faddish. They adapt today's fashions to their own tastes and activities, individualize them with their own accessories. And they like pockets, because pockets add to the ease of living."

Mrs. Simpson stresses the long-torso look in both suits and dresses for spring, and is careful to explain the type of foundation garment that should be worn with them—an all-in-one combination that smooths and lengthens the midriff, lifts and rounds the bust, gives the silhouette that long, unbroken line so important to the new styles.

WASHINGTON, (AP) — President Eisenhower, discussing Wolf Ladejinsky's case at his news conference, said this was a situation in which honest men came up with different answers.

The difference in their answers was profound. Because it was, the Democrats had new ammunition for their attacks on the whole operation of the administration's program to get security risks out of government jobs.

The Ladejinsky case broke while many Democrats were still boiling over Vice President Nixon's attacks on them in the 1954 election campaign, particularly for his statements on the number of Communists and other security risks being fired by this administration.

Under the security program a government worker can be let out as a security risk for a number of reasons in accordance with standards which, by their broadness, can leave room for the kind of difference of opinion that Eisenhower mentioned.

The government can bounce a man as a security risk if he's a Communist, if he has been found subversive, if there's information in his files which can be interpreted as subversive, if he's a drunk, homosexual, or a blabbermouth, or for other reasons.

And who does the interpreting? Officials in the agency where the man works have last say in the matter.

Ladejinsky, born in Russia but now a citizen, was twice found all right by the State Department, which employed him in a job in Japan. Agriculture Department officials, when he was transferred there, found him a risk.

Then Harold E. Stassen hired Ladejinsky to work for his Foreign Operations Administration. So two government agencies didn't consider the man a security risk; one did.

From time to time since the administration established the security program in the spring of 1953, it has released figures showing the number of people separated from the government and classed as security risks.

During last fall's campaign Nixon said: 'We're kicking Communists and fellow travelers and security risks out of the government, not by the hundreds but by the thousands."

It was this statement and others similar to itt hat the Democrats have complained about. No figures have been released to show how many of these persons classed a security risks were holdovers from the Truman administration, now many were first hired by the Eisenhower administration, or how many Communists were found.

Yesterday Eisenhower, who said Nixon had never condemned the Democratic party as a whole, and Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee, went to Nixon's defense under new and bitter Democratic attacks.

If Nixon and the Ladejinsky case weren't enough to keep the Democrats steamed up about the security program, the administration gave them a fresh talking point when it released its lagest figures Jan. 3. The Democrats, now running Congress, have been talking of investigating the whole program.

That report said, since the program started in mid-1953, 8,008 security risks have been fired or resigned from government jobs. It listed 2,096 of those under the head of subversion with this explanation:

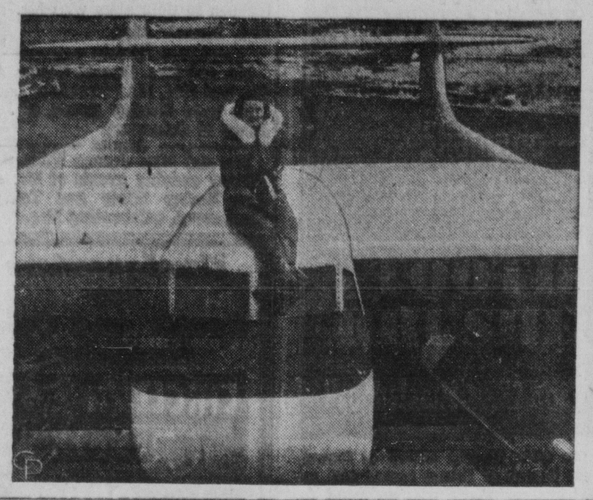

"Number whose files contained information indicating in varying degrees, subversive activities, subversive associations, or membership in subversive organizations."

The Washington Post and Times-Herald, friendly to the Eisenhower administration took a look at the figures and said editorially: "The great virtue . . . of 8,008 is that anyone can read it sitting upright or standing on his head without changing the figure."

The Post raised questions which Oemocrats in one way or another have asked: How many of these "security risks" resigned without ever knowing they were accused of anything; how many had information in their files about subversion that was real or imaginary or provided by people who were malicious or irresponsible?

At his news conference yesterday Eisenhower said he doesn't consider the security program perfect, that efforts are being made all the time to improve it.

IN MARCH, Miss Peggy Keenan, shown sitting on plane and in doorway, will become the first woman in history to set foot at the North Pole. She will have charge of the film production unit of an expedition whose aim is to perfect an instrument by which planes can gauge from the air the thickness of Arctic ice and thus its suitability for landings. The plane she sits on is the Burnelli Loadmaster, a craft with an extra wide, wing-like fuselage which enables it to take off and land in a 1,500-foot stretch. Shown with her in plane's door are Dr. Paul Seydell (left) and John F. Stanwell-Fletcher, who will command the expedition. (International)

Cincy City Tax Slated For Test

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court has agreed to rule on the validity of Cincinnati's city income tax.

Thomas H. Clark, Cincinnati attorney, charged the tax imposed between last April 1 and Oct. 31 was discriminatory. Acting for himself and others similarly situated, Clark asked an injunction against the 1 per cent levy on wages earned in the city and on net profits of professions and business.

Hamilton County common pleas court granted the injunction but an appellate court dissolved it and dismissed the action Clark then appealed to the high court.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Tells Troubles

NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Patricia Wallace Vanderbilt says the dinner she and her daughter ate on Thanksgiving Day in 1953 came from $5 given them by a kindly New York city policeman.

Testifying yesterday in her suit for separation from Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., she said she had exhausted her money and had applied for city relief that year.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, her husband's fifth wife, is suing on grounds of cruelty, abandonment and nonsupport and asks $1,500 a week alimony. Vanderbilt, who married her in 1948, says he got a Mexican divorce in 1953 and she is no longer his wife.

Weekly Food Review

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The emphasis will be on pork ts in the nation's food stores this end.

Prices are lower because of avy marketing of hogs. Many ores will be offering specials on rk loins, pork chops, fresh hams d smoked picnics. In some cases, n prices will be trimmed six nts a pound below a week ago.

"Housewives looking for good od buys will want to plan on fre- ent servings of various pork cuts January meals," comments the S. Department of Agriculture. Pork roasts and chops, ham, ba- n, sausage and spareribs point e way to menu variety at reason- le prices.

"Treat the family to pork loin ast for dinner this week," the SDA adds. "If a roast is too rge for your family, have the tcher cut off some chops. That y you will get pork chops at a wer price than buying them o . Use the chops first and store e roast to use afterward."

Leg of lamb will be another fa- rite weekend special, and some ores will drop prices on lamb ops.

Beef prices continue strong in holesale markets, but you may find lower prices in your market on chuck roast or round roast.

Frying chickens are edging high- er, with some markets boosting prices by from two to six cents a pound. There will be scattered specials on stewing and roasting chickens.

Eggs will be down a couple of cents a dozen in some areas and up in others.

On the list of the best buys in vegetables are potatoes and onions, old crop cabbage, radishes and nearby root crops—beets, carrots, parsnips and white turnips. Rated as good buys by produce specialists are pascal celery, peppers, new crop cabbage, eggplant, spinach, dry type sweet potatoes and cauliflower.

Golden heart celery is described as moderately priced. Lettuce is considerably higher and the quality is not too good.

Tangerines are considered the outstanding buy in fruits. Also recommended: Oranges, grapefruit, apples, limes and emperor grapes.

amous Author, Killer Wins th Reprieve From Death

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Caryl essman, convicted in 1948 of kid- ping and attempted rape in Los ngeles lovers' lanes, has been anted his fifth reprieve from ath in San Quentin's gas cham- r.

Judge William Denman of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals sterday granted Chessman a y of execution, ruling there was probable cause for appeal."

The 33-year-old author of "Cell 55, Death Row" has engaged in years of legal maneuvering om San Quentin. His case has en before the U.S. Supreme urt five times and has run the mut of lower courts.

The new stay means Chessman ll be given a hearing before the Circuit Court, probably in about o months. The court will then hold or reverse the Jan. 4 ruling Federal Dist. Judge Louis E. odman, who dismissed Chess- an's petition for a writ of habeas rpus. Goodman called the peti- n a repetitious abuse of the writ habeas corpus.

If Goodman's ruling is reversed, essman will be given a hearing the U.S. District Court of Ap- al.

If Goodman's ruling is upheld, essman can still make another fort before U.S. Supreme Court. e Supreme Court said Chessman uld file a new application for a rit of habeas corpus in Federal District Court after it denied a review of his case last October.

The Supreme Court has rejected five applications for a writ of review. Chessman also has been turned down by the State Supreme Court on one appeal and three applications for a writ of habeas corpus. The U.S. District Court has rejected five applications for a writ of habeas corpus. And he lost a previous appeal in the same court where yesterday's stay was granted.

Yet his intensive legal action has resulted in five stays of execution since he entered San Quentin July 3, 1948.

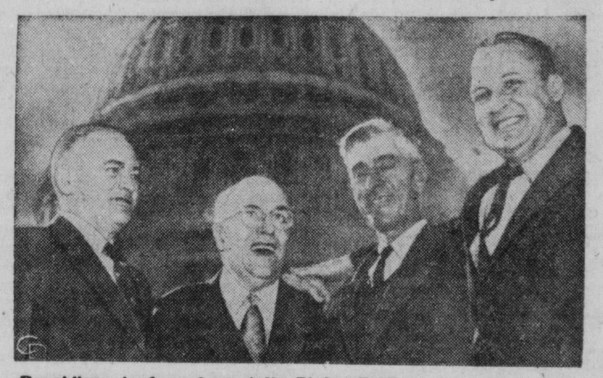

The "probable cause of appeal" named in yesterday's stay concerns the transcript made of Chessman's court trial for appeal purposes. The clerk who took the trial notes in shorthand died before he could finish transcribing them, and this job was completed by a substitute who said he could not make out all of his predecessor's notes.

Judge Denman, in granting the stay, noted Chessman's contention that he was not permitted to attend script for his appeal was so litigated" and was not represented by counsel.

If this is true, the judge said, it presents "a justifiable question whether the due process provisions of the 14th Amendment have been violated."

Sightless Solon Getting Along OK

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Robert D. Mahoney, 33, has taken his seat in the Michigan Legislature. So has his dog Happy. . .

Mahoney, though blind since he was 15, said after yesterday's opening session that he thinks he can keep pace with his colleagues in the House.

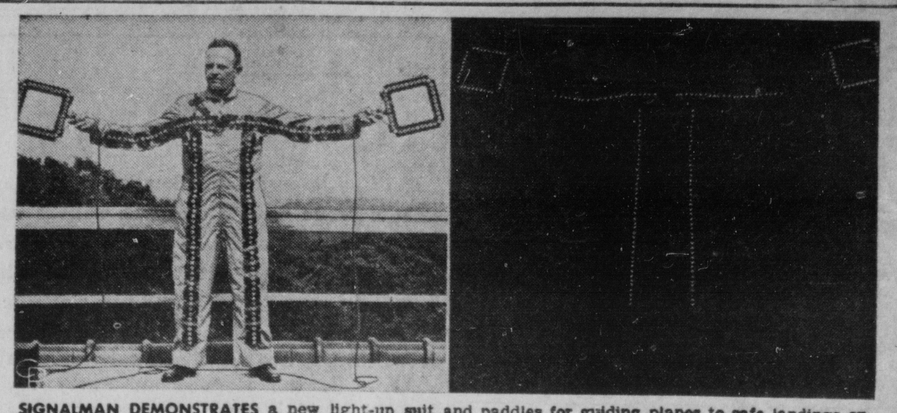

For taking notes, he uses a slate and stylus to print in Braille. Other representatives have offered to read to him much of the voluminous legislation he will have to study.

"So you see," said Mahoney, a Detroit Democrat, "it seems like a major problem, but actually it's a pretty minor one.'

Forestdale Folks Protest Gas Deal

COLUMBUS (AP)—Seventy - five residents of Forestdale, Lawrence County, have protested against the construction cost of a gas line proposed by the United Fuel Gas Co.

The company said a low pressure line which feeds the Coal Grove area was inadequate for Forestdale residents. They proposed construction of a 12,748-foot medium pressure pipe line to serve the Forestdale area with construction costs for each customer to run about $130. But Forestdale residents said 5,800 feet of the proposed line would go through Coal Grove and they objected to paying the costs for that section of the line.

PAYING FOR REARMAMENT

NOW THAT THE rearming of Germany is a possibility it is interesting to note what part the U. S. will play in an arrangement which promises to make Western Europe more secure against possible Russian aggression.

Final important factors are yet to be determined, but the administration is moving on the theory that final accord will be reached.

Final decisions are expected to be made by April, and the German army may begin to form by May. Contracts for arms to be supplied by the United States are being negotiated. These will consist mainly of tanks, fighter aircraft and some artillery. European factories will supply other units, but these will be paid for by Washington.

Already military supplies are being transferred to warehouses in France, England and Germany, to be available the minute the agreement becomes a certainty.

The burden of world peace rests heavier and heavier upon the United States. Whatever efforts are made in that direction, Washington is expected to pay the bill. To reconvert Germany into a military power will cost a pretty penny. But Washington diplomatic minds see this as the only answer to world problems.

It could turn out to be money well spent at that, but that is not to contend that it could not be as well spent by some other country.

EGGS FOR BREAKFAST

CONCERNED OVER rising production and falling prices the Agricultural Department will try to do something to stabilize the egg market. The government wants the populace to go on an egg-eating project through January. Hens are flooding the market at a season of the year when production is usually low.

An extra egg for breakfast and the use of more in cooking will help to lessen the surplus, the government advises. Besides eggs are recommended as an excellent contribution to nutritive needs.

Producers have been imploring the government for price support, which has been refused. However, 72 million eggs will be taken off the market, to be dried under a new and improved process. However, the government is not going back in the egg business, and the problem has to be solved in some other way. Increased consumption will be helpful.

There was a time in earlier days when eggs played an important part in household economy. Exchanged at the local grocery store they provided many of the food staples, especially sugar and coffee. Mother accumulated some cash, which came in handy for family needs. Now eggs are big business, which seems to have got out of hand.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

It is perhaps a sound adage to 'Let sleeping dogs lie." The Peress Case is one which does not seriously involve the now celebrated dentist, but it has affected the careers of many others, and has since last March stirred the country by the quarrel between the Army and Senator McCarthy. It has split the Republican Party right down the middle, and has been an embarrassment to everybody who came close to it.

The case of Peress itself is hardly important. There must be many instances in the Army, which processes millions of young men and women, as the phrase goes, in which papers are inadequately or improperly made out and are negligently handled. It was therefore surprising to those who were close to the case that the Army should have made such a fuss over it.

The answer to all of Senator McCarthy's questions could have been—"Sorry! Here is another paper snafu. In the handling of millions of papers, there will be a snafu here and there. We shall make whatever corrections are needed and we shall explore our methods to insure that there are fewer errors.'

But no such answer was given. As I have been mentioned, too often, in the original Stevens-McCarthy testimony, and as I was present during a conference between them, and had some telephone calls, by his initation, with John Adams, the Army report issued last Friday comes as no surprise to me. I knew that John Adams had pushed the 'Honorable Discharge" of Major Peress as a solution of the problem. He thought that if Peress was got out of the Army, McCarthy ought to be satisfied.

Unfortunately, the issue was never Peress, just as in the Fuchs-Rosenberg Cases, the issue should never have been Dr. Klaus Fuchs or Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. The issue was, with regard to Peress and should have been in the Fuchs-Rosenberg Cases—who makes it easy for spies, subversives and such to infiltrate the agencies of government?

This is very unpleasant business and everyone who engages in it burns his fingers, if not more than that. Definitely it looks like persecution. Those who do these jobs look like relentless, fanatical persecutors. Nobody has yet found a method of unearthing spies and subversives pleasantly.

The Subcommittee on Rules of the Senate, headed by Senator William Jenner, has held long hearings on the subject of such investigations and has come up with a report on procedural rules which look very good in the report and ought to be adopted, if for no reason than experimentally to see whether they will achieve the end desired, which is the accumulation of information.

As long as Executive Departments can withhold valuable and valid information from Congressional committees, no rules will help the committees. For instance, had the Army's report on Peress been sent to the Congress last March, when as much was known about the case as is known today, there would have been no disgraceful fracas between the Army and a committee of Congress. Now, it has to start all over again to straighten out the record.

Tension Often Causes Terrible Headaches

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

GOT a headache?

Well, if you don't have one this very minute, chances are you had one yesterady, or will have one in the very near future. Most people have a lot of needless headaches.

I think I can give you some suggestions on how to avoid some of them, and how to bring fairly quick relief when you do get one.

Simple Variety

Now I am speaking about the simple headaches, and not those caused by some disease such as brain tumor or abscess, or inflammation of the scalp nerves.

A great many of you, I'm sure, can blame your headaches on tension. If you're nervous and tense, or upset emotionally, you can expect frequent attacks. Busy executives are often victims of tension headaches.

Pressure in Head

You actually have a feeling of tension in your head during such an attack. You feel pressure within your head and a tight band seems to be binding it. Frequently, your muscles will also feel tense during a headache like this.

Migraine headaches, caused by enlargement of the head's blood vessels, may also often be laid directly to worry and nervousness.

The remedies? They are really quite simple.

Take It Easy

You've just got to relax more. Take it easy; don't get upset over little things. Try not to be quite so perfect in everything you do. Look at the bright side of things. Remember, whatever worries you may have today won't seem so bad tomorrow.

There are a few other things you've got to do, too. Avoid eyestrain. Have your eyes examined at least every two years.

Get Enough Sleep

Keep regular hours and get plenty of sleep.

Maintain a normal bowel movement. I'll have more to say about this in another column soon.

Migraine might also be caused by some sensitivity to food or to some substance in your environment. So keep a written record of your headaches, and check to see whether they are related to any specific food or activities. Sometimes, however, migraine is inherited from your parents.

What can you do to relieve a headache when you do get one? I'll tell you tomorrow.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

L. W.: My 19-year-old niece has albumin in her urine. Could you prescribe a diet she can follow to get rid of it?

Answer: It is advisable for your niece to have a careful study made by a physician to determine just why the albumin is present.

It might be due to some inflammation of the kidneys or bladder. It might also be due to a disorder known as nephrosis. Sometimes albumin may be present without any organic disturbance.

Once the cause is found proper treatment can be prescribed.

HAWK WATCH

SYNOPSIS

While photographing a hawk migration in the mountains of West Virginia, ace professional lensman, Charles Gratton, learns that some one is dying an eagle, a grave infraction of local game laws. He explores the ledge where he has seen an eagle in flight and comes upon a decadent mansion now occupied by one Anson Metcalf and his sister, Dana, both expert falconers. As Gratton approaches the residence, he is greeted by lovely young Dana who manages to keep at bay a vicious dog guarding the place. She ignores the intruder's reference to eagles, diverting him by exhibiting her pet hawk, "Butcherboy," a wicked looking fellow who meekly obeys the girl's commands. Dana speaks of her father who long ago had left this house, and of her hope of one day leaving here to join him. Returning to the village, Gratton finds a demolished car which had been towed in from a canyon. Search had failed to produce a driver or a body.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

THE old barber finished his sandwich and moved to the marble wash basins, where he very carefully scrubbed and dried his hands. Then he shuffled toward the far chair, sucking his lunch out of his teeth with little sounds like a chirping sparrow.

I pointed to the mugs. "Do you mind telling me a little about these?"

He hobbled over, his chocolate skin wrinkled into a smile. He had put on steel-framed spectacles which made him look like a sleepy Mahatma Gandhi.

"You seem to have a lot of customers," I said.

He shook his head slowly. "Most of those gen'men gone on, suh." He said it very sadly. "Only five still livin'."

"These look in use."

"I dust them every morning."

"Were they all local men?" I asked.

He took his glasses off and polished them, blinking.

"Lots of them was summer folks, come down from the cities to take the waters. Back when Fairfax Springs was really something. Come back each year, each gen'man come in here for his own barber."

"You had other barbers?"

"We had all six chairs workin', suh." He grew an inch in height. "When Fairfax Springs was something."

"I imagine you remember most of your customers well," I said casually.

"Deed I do." He took down a pale number done in forget-me-nots and gold initials. "Some of the ladies used to hand-paint their husbands' shaving mugs in those days. This is Mr. Morgan with the posies. He only wanted once over." He set it oack and lifted a pink and gold one, frowning at a speck on the interior. "Mr. Wakefield, that. Cold water with his lather."

"Why is this one blank?" I asked, touching an undecorated mug.

"That," he snorted. "That's Mr. Cadwaller from New York." He turned the mug around but left it sitting in its niche. It was the first time I'd seen a nude with a Police Gazette silhouette in china painting.

"That's quite artistic," I grinned. "Did his wife paint that?"

"He was a bachelor, suh." He turned the mug around with the lady to the wall. "All three of those gen'men long dead."

"Did you ever have a client by the name of Metcalf?" I asked.

He picked a mug from the lower row, black with an intricate Old English M in gold.

"There," he said proudly, "is Mr. Anson Metcalf. One hot towel and twice over. A fine gen'man."

"You know the family?"

"I ought to, suh. Done their barberin' almost since I started workin' here in nineteen hundred." He put the mug carefully in its place.

"While you work on me," I followed him to the furthest chair, "tell me a little about Mr. Metcalf. Any man with a shaving mug like that must be interesting."

I sat down on the cracked black leather seat and said to give me a trim, fairly close. I noticed the bottles at the other chairs were empty.

While he adjusted a starched cloth about my neck with very clean-smelling hands, he started on a long train of reminiscence, talking around a couple of straight pins pinched in his lips. He finally used the pins to fasten the neck cloth and I could understand him better.

"Mr. Metcalf started coming here after his own hotel burned down. Always come to me. Say no one but Jeff could shave him right. Stop in every time he come to town." He'd begun to nibble at the back of my neck with a pair of hand clippers.

"You say he owned a hotel?"

"The Metcalf House, suh. Over next to the mineral springs. Burned down 'long about nineteen two."

"You're talking about a different Anson Metcalf," I said. "I'm thinking of a young man."

"That's young Mr. Anson. He's the grandson." In the mirror I could see him shaking his head. "That's different, suh. Yessuh, mighty different."

He laid down his clippers and started with his comb and scissors.

I let him get under way and then I asked, "You know him?"

"Yessuh, he come in 'bout every two months with his hair long and straggledy. Young Mr. Anson don't take the care in his looks like his granddaddy did."

He stopped and looked at me over my shoulder in the mirror while his scissors went on munching on thin air.

"Ever notice, suh, folkses' breedin' don't run true to form like horses and bird dogs. People has done too much helter skelterin'." He went back to his slow work on my hair.

"You say young Anson has no pride?"

He stopped, motionless. "Nosuh. I didn't say nuthin' like that. He got all kinds of pride. I say he don't take no care of his looks."

"What about the father? Old Anson's son?"

"He used to come in here." We weren't making much progress because every time he talked he stopped cutting. "Mr. John Metcalf never seemed to be the man his daddy was. He was a gen'man. I don't mean he wasn't, but beside old Mr. Anson drivin' up and tyin' his fast horses out in front, Mr. John never seemed to have much subject to him. You know the kind, suh."

He scratched his gray mossy head and chuckled.

"For all of that, he married one mighty handsome lady. Yessuh, Miss Belle, she was a beauty."

"Really?"

"Mr. John, he twice as old as Miss Belle, they say. No one never thought he had it in him."

After a while I said, "You don't see young Anson very often?"

"Nosuh. He live 'way back up on the mountain and no one see him much. Always been peculiar. Makes me use his granddaddy's mug and brush on him. Want everything just like the old days." His reflection watched me from the mirror. "They say nothing's been changed up at the old home. No electric, nothing different from the way his granddaddy had it." He shook his head. "And if that's how young Mr. Anson want it, I can tell you that's how it gwine to be. He that kind of young gen'man. Have his way or bust."

"What does this young Mr. Anson look like?" I asked.

He stopped again to do his thinking. "It strange about young Mr. Anson," he said. "He come in here and he go out. Then a long time pass and he come and go again and after he gone it's hard to say what he look like. Ain't no one look like young Mr. Anson, I don't guess."

"Well," I made an effort, "is he big?"

"Cain't say he look big but he seem big. Yessuh, guess it's that he talk and feel big."

"Is he light complexioned?"

"His hair dark. Real black and long. But his skin, it white."

"His face—what's it like?"

"Best I can remember it always looks unhappy. Like somethin' hurt inside. Kind of hard for me to remember much how my gen'men look. They all look like their shaving mugs settin' back there in rows. That's now I think young Mr. Anson look. Like that shaving mug—gold and black."

I thought about that for a long time while he droned on.

It must have got me for I came to when he laid a brushful of warm lather at my temples.

He chuckled as he stropped his razor with a slow, slapping sound. "Yessuh, somethin' 'bout the way I works puts folks to sleep."

He tilted my head and laid the straight sharp razor on my cheekbone, feeling for the place to start.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

news behind the news

By Ray Tucker

WASHINGTON — The current proposal that a super-commission of eminent nonpartisans investigate and reorganize the federal security system has been rejected secretly by President Eisenhower and his principal political advisers on several occasions. They have turned it down because of their belief that it was a Communist attempt to destroy any safeguard against fellow-travelers of the Alger Hiss and Harry White variety.

The President is known to have strong feelings on this subject, along with Attorney-General Herbert Brownell Jr., Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield and Sherman Adams, White House chief of staff.

Although the system's operation may cause individual hardship and sometimes injustice, they believe that any doubt remaining after painstaking and conscientious scrutiny of a suspect should be resolved in favor of the government and the people of the United States.

LADEJINSKY — Nor does Ike see any consistency between Secretary Ezra Taft Benson's and Foreign Operations Administrator Harold E. Stassen's conflicting judgments on Wolfe Ladejinsky, Asian land elpert. As both note, two men may draw different conclusions from the same set of facts.

Even the Supreme Court frequently divides five-to-four on far more important issues. In fact, Justice Felix Frankfurter has reversed himself without blinking a judicial eye. No system can erase human imperfections.

When the idea of revision of the FSS was first advanced several years ago by allegedly pinkish professors under congressional investigation, it was regarded as an attack on Sen. Joe McCarthy and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Eisenhower had not then broken with the Wisconsin senator.

Ike turned the problem over to a committee consisting of Milton Eisenhower, Nelson Rockefeller, and Arthur S. Fleming, head of defense mobilization. They recommended retention of the present system, but amendments giving more defense and appeal rights to the accused were adopted.

CRITICS—The revision, however, did not placate or satisfy the critics, and the attack was renewed before and during the 1954 off-year campaign. Friends of Owen Lattimore, including many former New Deal officials, headed the movement Stevenson denounced the procedure, too.

Finally, after a high-level conference, Eisenhower himself killed the idea. He acted on the advice of Brownell, Summerfield and Adams. They argued that the sponsors of an overhaul were anti-Administration troublemakers. They also pointed out that endorsement of the plan for an investigation and revision would amount to indictment of the Eisenhower-Brownell methods.

As periodical announcement of the number of "risk" discharges and resignations by the Civil Service Commission reveals, Ike is extremely proud of his achievements in this field. Getting rid of infiltrators was a major 1952 pledge, and McCarthy prodding has made it a political necessity.

EXAMINATION — The renewed attack results from Administrative handling of the Ladejinsky, Oppenheimer, Service and Davies cases. It has been shifted from McCarthy and J. Edgar Hoover to Ike himself. Democrats will make it an issue on Capitol Hill, for all the articulate accused, from Lattimore to Ladejinsky, were appointed or promoted by Roosevelt and Truman.

The Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic has allocated $100,000 for an examination of the federal security system, and it will be conducted by the New York Bar Association Oddly, the Fund for the Republic was recently headed by Sen. Clifford P. Case of New Jersey, a bitter McCarthy foe. But the Ford interests, both philanthropic and industrial, are extremely pro-Ike.

The latest batch of critics apsponsored inquiry might be too favorable to the President. It may be significant that they include a St. Louis newspaper notoriously anti-Ike. and a weekly news magazine columnist who was a close friend and biographer of Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is expected that Ike will stand pat, and await the results of the Ford study.

Try, Stop Me

For one of their musical plays, P. G. Wodehouse and Guy Bolton wanted Billy B. Van in the comedy lead, but their frugal producer, Colonel Henry Savage, demurred. "Van gets three hundred a week. The part's worth only half that to me. But if you boys are so set on having Van, I tell you what I'll do. Pay half his salary for the first three months and I'll hire him."

Van was a big hit in the role. For three months, Wodehouse and Bolton faithfully poined up a hundred and fifty simoleons of their own to pay half his salary.

At the end of the third month Colonel Savage fired him.

GOVERNMENT ABANDONS SMALLEST POST OFFICE

Mrs. Catherine Probst stands in doorway of what had been nation's smallest post office before it was closed.

By VIC RUSSELL
Central Press Correspondent

VAN BUREN, Mo.—One by one the many attractions of the old Ozarks are disappearing from the hillsides. The latest to bow out of the public picture is what has been heralded for 40 years as the smallest post office in the United States.

There are many, many small post offices in the back of general stores throughout the United States, but the Handy, Mo., post office was in a building all by itself.

The outside of the building was only 8 by 10 feet and made from slab boards (the outside of a saw log with bark attached).

THE LITTLE P. O. would have been crowded with three people in it, so most mail delivery was made by Postmistress Catherine Probst handing it out from the front door.

It didn't matter what time of the day or night people called for their mail. Mrs. Probst unfastened the large safety pin which held the postoffice key securely on her dress, unlocked the building which stood in the front yard of her farm home and gave the caller his mail.

The Probst farm is rolling land and a grove of virgin pine, all that is left of the magnificent pine forest which once covered that locality, shelters the house and the post office building.

A RECENT ORDER from the Post Office department has now closed this quaint post office because of lack of revenue. It had served only a dozen or so families scattered around the hills. Mail was brought into the office by a star route delivery from a town 20 miles away on the railroad.

The handy post office was built in 1913, when workers, laboring a sawmill which had cut off the pine timber was moving away, decided to stay on and farm the fertile valleys. They were virtually cut off from civilization, with the removal of the timber trains.

Noah Haney, father of Mrs. Probst, rode horseback over the hills to get names on a petition which brought mail into the community and made him postmaster. The name "Handy" was adopted when one farmer remarked how handy it was going to be to have mail brought right to them.

Mrs. Probst took over the job of postmistress when her father could no longer keep it and those two have been the only two to have charge of the postoffice for 42 years.

THE POST OFFICE was used a great deal by fishermen and hunters who came into the hills, chiefly to get a cancellation from the smallest post office in the United States. It became one of the favored stopping places for out-county and out-state visitors on their annual trips into that section of the Ozarks.

For years, Mrs. Probst's husband shipped Christmas trees to many midwestern cities and as far away as the west coast to boost the revenue of the small post office.

Shipments, however, have lessened in the past few years and revenue has fallen off so that the government thought it advisable to close it.

Sidewalk 'Burns' In California

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—A sauntering pedestrian stopped to light his pipe yesterday and half a block of sidewalk began to burn with a bang.

The startled pipe smoker fled like a turpentied cat and police never did find him to learn if he'd been burned. Firemen found that a leaking gas main beneath the pavement caused the explosion and the trail of fire which ran along the cracks.

Full-Scale Hearings Slated By Ohio Assembly Leaders

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Senate, under the spur of its Republican leadership, swings into full-scale hearings on several primary bills next week, just two weeks after convening of the Legislature.

Both House and Senate started a long weekend recess at noon yesterday. But in the interval until they reconvene at 8 p. m. Monday law-makers will be busy getting more proposed bills into shape.

Members are working against a Feb. 14 deadline for introduction of bills. House members weren't surprised at the deadline, for they customarily observe one. But the decision of Senate Majority Leader C. Stanley Mechem that the Senate would observe a deadline for the first time since 1939 hit his colleagues an unexpected blow.

Representatives and senators combined yesterday to introduce another 22 proposed laws. That brings the total offered in the first two weeks of the session to 131.

Mechem, weary of the drawn-out sessions of recent years, got out the whip early and insisted his committee chairmen schedule quick hearings on bills already introduced. The result was that six of the 20 committees scheduled hearings next week on 12 of the 44 bills now before the Senate.

One of the top-interest bills now before the Senate is scheduled for its first hearing Monday night after the Senate session.

It is a measure by Sen. David McK. Ferguson (R-Guernsey) to strip the Ohio Turnpike Commission of the authority to issue bonds for further turnpike construction without approval of the Legislature. The change in the law would give the Legislature the whip hand in deciding whether new turnpikes are to be built and what routes they would take.

The Senate Highways and Public Utilities Committee will hear friends and foes of the bill. Ferguson is the committee's chairman.

Two measures important to the state's judges are down for hearing Wednesday before the Senate finance and judiciary committees.

Before the finance group is a bill to raise the salaries of judges ranging from $20,000 for the Supreme Court's chief justice and $19,000 for associate justices to a minimum of $7,000 for judges of common pleas courts. Minimum salary for the latter now is $4,000.

The Senate Judiciary Committee will start hearings Wednesday on a proposal to permit increases in salary, but no decreases, for public officials during their terms of office.

The change, because it is an amendment to the State Constitution, requires a three-fifths favorable vote of both houses of the Legislature and a majority approval of the voters.

It has the support of the Ohio Bar Assn. and of Gov. Frank J Lausche, who terms the present bar against salary increases "manifestly unfair."

Heifer Project Seeks New Aid

NEW WINDSOR, Md. (AP) — The board of Heifer Project, Inc., has announced that this year other countries of plenty, as well as the United States, will be asked to provide livestock for distribution in war-ravaged and agriculturally undeveloped areas.

The group hopes to obtain and distribute 1,200 head of cattle, 500 goats, 400 pigs, 1,000 chicks and 400 packages of honey bees to needy areas this year. Much of the work will be done in Austria and Germany, to help set up refugees from Communist countries on farm of their own.

Chiang's Bombers Strike Reds Again

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — Nationalist China's air force headquarters said its four-engine bombers had "excellent results" in a three-wave attack yesterday on Communist-held Toumen and Tienao islands.

The Nationalists said all planes returned to Formosa, 200 miles south of the islands, despite anti-aircraft fire and Red air force fighters.

This was the third straight day's strike against Tienao, which is almost next door to the Nationalists' Tachens, which were attacked by 100 Red planes Monday.

NEW MAPS APPEAR AS REAL AS ACTUAL AERIAL PHOTOS

By JOHN F. SEMBOWER
Central Press Correspondent

DENVER, Colo.—You just look at the newest type aerial maps as if you were in an airplane thousands of feet above the earth, instead of learning to "read" them.

These new type maps which are the rage with flyers of all kinds of planes and are beginning to make their appearance in geography classrooms in the nation's schools, are the invention of a former airline pilot who spotted the need for such a revolutionary technique of cartography while he flew the Omaha-San Francisco route.

Elrey B. Jeppesen

Elrey Jeppesen bought a 10-cent store notebook and began making detailed notes of his observations of the terrain down below him. Word got around among the commercial pilots about his notebook, and other pilots wanted copies of those notes. Some of them made payment by exchanging the notes and sketches they made of their routes.

That was the start of the Jeppesen Airway Manual which now is standard equipment for most pilots. It is a loose leaf notebook that is packed with these graphic contour maps of every section of the United States. Special attention is given to the approaches to airports.

However, the by-product of this venture, the large-scale production of maps, has become a huge operation. More than seven million of the new maps that are so realistic they seem to jump off the paper have been produced in about four years.

LOOKING at such a map, Junior doesn't need to be told why the pioneers went through Cumberland gap on their way to the west; he can see for himself that at that point there is a low-level path through the mountains.

The Hudson valley actually looks like the place where people would move in and populate. The trails to the far west snake along as logically as can be. The eastern mountains are relatively low and green, showing evidence of the forests that cover them; the western peaks are rocky gray and many are snow-covered.

The realistic effect is the result of a deliberate effort at getting a pictorial result. Art Director Hal Shelton of the Jeppesen organization often takes scores of aerial photos as guides for making maps. Many of these show the "field pattern" that airplane travelers see aloft, and cities are not dots on the maps but actually take on the shapes that flyers see.

TECHNICALLY, the Jeppesen technique is known among mapmakers as a Lambert Conformal projection. It has long been recognized as the best way to make official aeronautical charts.

More conventional maps use the "hachure" method of indicating levels by short pen strokes which indicate the margins of mountains and ridges, or the "contour" method that uses wavy lines to show different levels. The latter often requires expert reading.

Instead of using certain set colors to indicate altitudes, the new maps portray the ground as it actually looks from the air—buffs and reds predominate throughout the west; lush green appears in the middle west, south and east, and the mountains are pictured just as they are.

EVERY MAP is a detailed third-dimensional drawing, the uncanny raised effect being obtained by the use of shadings which do not appear to be shading at all.

Because they are so realistic, the Jeppesen maps are constantly being double checked by the users, who frequently write in to tell of differences they have noted.

The map makers recheck the terrain at the earliest opportunity, and usually are able to advise their correspondent where his own observation was a little off.

"However, whoever heard of anyone being able to use an ordinary map so realistically that he could feel qualified to suggest changes?" comments Jeppesen, who gets a kick out of every time that his map users feel impelled to get into the act of their preparation.

Mail-Carrying Feud Boiling To New High

Airliners And Trucks Taking Firm Stand Against Railroads

It brings to sharp focus the deadly rivalry between the railroads, on the one hand, and the airlines and truckers on the other.

The feud came to a boil in October 1953 when the post office launched an "experiment" of flying first class 3-cent mail on the New York-Chicago and Washington - Chicago routes whenever airlines had space available for it. The experiment was broadened to include Florida points and local airlines covering 125 scattered communities. This deprived the rails of sizeable mail revenues.

The railroads got even madder when the experiment spread to include major Pacific Coast cities last November.

But Postmaster General Summerfield reported last month that in the initial stage of the West Coast "air life" ordinary letters bearing 3-cent stamps had been advanced in delivery by from 24 to 48 hours.

"To date the 3-cent mail by air experiment is improving mail service at slight savings in over-all cost to those formerly paid," said Summerfield.

The railroads protested that the savings were only apparent and ignored the "complete" mail service rendered by the rails. The airlines and their allies, the truckers, argued back. Thousands of words were exchanged.

The rails say that already the experiment has wiped out most of their lucrative haulage of first class mail on the New York-Chicago-Washington routes.

The industry complains that it has invested close to a billion dollars in mail handling facilities whereas the airlines and truckers have invested nothing and the taxpayers must provide these for them.

They protest further that they are required by law—under pain of severe penalties—to carry all mail offered them and to carry it on any and all trains the post office may direct.

In contrast, say the railroads, the airlines carry 3-cent mail only on a "space available" basis—when it is not crowded out by more profitable payloads of passengers or cargo. Thus, say the rails, the airlines "skim the cream" of the mail business, leaving the railroads the "crumbs."

Railroads have challenged the legality of carrying 3-cent mail by air and have launched court actions. But the experiment goes on.

Meanwhile, the railroads are losing more mail revenue, they say, because the post office has awarded contracts to motor carriers to carry mail on more than 550 routes.

The diversion of mail, they add, if carried to the limit, means that the railroads will suffer a potential loss of mail revenues amounting to 300 million dollars a year. This will threaten the jobs of many of the 50,000 rail employes who handle mail and compel cancellation of hundreds of passenger trains now operating near the break-event point, they say.

But the airlines and truckers call the rails' billion-dollar figure on mail facilities "unrealistic" and say the 300 million figure covers total mail revenues, not just first class which they assert was only 40 million dollars in 1953, or 2-5 of one per cent of all mail revenues.

They argue that, just as the railroads succeeded the canal boat and stage coach as mail carriers, give way, at least to some degree, before more modern means of transportation.

They quote Summerfield's statement to the Senate in 1953:

"We propose to utilize all available means of transportation, believing that all are important to our national economy."

Ohio 1954 Strike Record Shows Dip

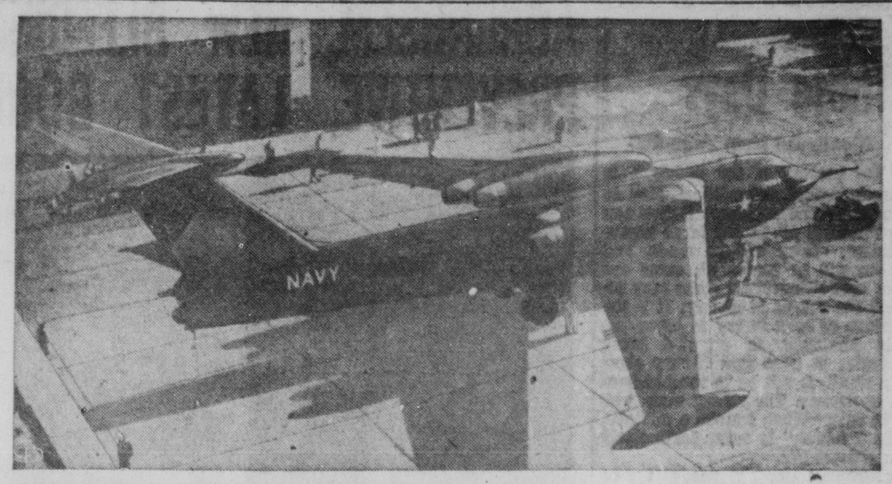

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Department of Industrial Relations says Ohio's strike record for 1954 was considerably better than the previous year and the post World War II average.

Director Margaret A. Mahoney said preliminary 1954 work stoppage figures showed 260 stoppages beginning during the year involving 140,000 workers, half the number in 953. But idleness dropped only about 20 per cent, indicating 1954 strikes averaged slightly longer than those in 1953.

Idle Pay Claims Show Increase

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation reports an estimated 21,886 claimants newly unemployed for the week ended Jan. 8 compared to 18,241 the previous week.

Claimants unemployed one week or more were estimated at 93,741 compared to 90,273 the previous week. These totals do not include those who have received their maximum payments and still may be unemployed.

Court To Hear Vet's Protest

COLUMBUS (AP) — A Cincinnati war veteran yesterday won a round in his latest attempt to prevent appropriation of tax money to veterans organizations.

The Ohio Supreme Court agreed to review appellate court dismissal of his suit to enjoin distribution of some $265,000 to eight chartered groups for the biennium ending next June 30.

Brunner Dickman contended as a taxpayer that the appropriations were unconstitutional. He said they amounted to use of public funds for private purposes. The propriated about a quarter of a million dollars to veterans groups.

When you want to Go
-You're gonna Go!

No ifs, ands or buts about it.

When you give the gun to a 1955 Buick with Dynaflow Drive,* you move.

In the instant you push down the pedal, you get the action you've called for—immediate getaway from a standing start, or immediate safety-surge out of a tight spot on the highway.

It's not magic, this thrilling and pulse-quickening response—though it feels like the closest thing to it.

It's a principle of the modern airplane, brought for the first time to an automotive transmission.

Twenty "variable pitch propellers" inside the Dynaflow unit itself can change their angle—like the propeller of the airliner can change its pitch from take-off position to cruising position.

And what this brings to you—at the wheel of a 1955 Buick—is the nearest thing to flight on wheels. Far better gas mileage in your normal driving and cruising. Spectacular new response when you want it for extra quick getaway or emergency acceleration.

But all this, mind you, with the absolute smoothness that is constant in Dynaflow Drive.

Surely, a demonstration of Variable Pitch Dynaflow is a Buick must this year. We'll be happy to do the honors—and show you, in the doing, what a whale of a buy you make here. Drop in this week, won't you?

Mrs. Shopper Being Courted By Merchants

Businessmen Finding Smiles, Wide Variety Of Merchandise Needed

NEW YORK (AP)—Things are looking up these days for the missus who goes a - shopping Never has she been courted so assiduously by the merchants who depend on her trade.

The concentrated frenzy with which retailers are striving to find out what you, the consumer, really want is apt to be a leading topic of conversation wherever merchants gather. It was certainly very much in evidence this week at the annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Assn. here.

Merchants think finding the right answer will lead them to better sales and profits—at a time when some segments of retailing, notably the department store, have been pinched by growing competition and rising costs.

For you as Mr or Mrs. Average Shopper the new preoccupation with customers' needs should add up to pleasanter shopping all around. Here are some improvements you can look for:

Salesgirls who smile, help you with your packages, and call you by name.

A bigger assortment of attractive merchandise, where and when you want it, and at prices you want to pay.

A whirlwind store expansion program. Expenditures for chain store construction and modernization this year are expected to show a gain of 10 per cent over record 1954. This will mean more new stores in outlying shopping centers, and more face lifting of older stores in established Main Street locations. Top NRDGA officials say a really vigorous effort will be made in 1955 to revitalize the Main Street store. Figuring prominently in this planning are such costly improvements as air-conditioning, new display fixtures, new lighting, new interiors. new fronts, and facilities for off - street parking.

In a further move to keep their customers happy, dry good merchants are hanging out the help wanted sign for a type of employee they describe as "the old-time buyer." When she bought new merchandise, the old - time buyer always kept her customers' wants in mind. If it was a dress she was buying, she imagined how that dress would look when the customer tried it on. She knew exactly what kind of parties, socials and occasions the customer wanted the dress for, and exactly why the dress would be bought. Her contemporary counterpart, some retailers complain, just goes out and orders the merchandise, and then wonders why the customer doesn't buy it.

Meanwhile there's evidence that established retailers are taking a good hard second look at discount house competition. All during 1954, policy making officials of the NRDGA (it's the nation's biggest retail trade association) denounced the discount merchant as a "bootlegger" and discount merchandising as an "evil."

But at their convention this week they gave top oilling to a speaker who eloquently defended the discount operator. Assistant Secretary of Commerce James C. Worthy (formerly a top Sears, Roebuck & Co. executive) told the meeting that the discount house is here to stay.

"The pheonomenal growth of the discount house and discount selling should be the signal for a reappraisal of conventional merchandising policies," he said, "for it is unquestionably a response to the consumer's desire for a wider degree of latitude in which to exercise his free choice as how he wants to spend his money. And as one with deep convictions about the American system, I would not deny him this freedom."

Sokolsky's These Days

The essence of the problem is psychological, not political. Men do not like to admit errors if they can cover them up. In any large organization, errors will be made and some will be corrected; some are not ever discovered; some may affect the course of history. It is the nature of man to try to cover up his mistakes, to avoid being caught, to hope that if they show up at all, it will be in the hands of a successor. The strong man who can say: "When I make a mistake, it's a beaut," is rare, particularly in official life.

Nevertheless, it needs to be known how the spies, subversives and perverts managed to get into our government operations and to stay there. Catching some little fellow down the line is an individual act that means little or nothing. What needs to be known is the pattern of operations that made it so easy for them to get in and stay in.

Maybe no individual is to blame; maybe it is a faulty system of government employment; maybe it is just the normal American attitude of live and let live. Whatever it is, Secretary Stevens of the Army has reopened the door to another series of investigations.

French-Italian Parleys Continue

ROME (AP) — French Premier Pierre Mendes-France kept up his whirlwind round of calls and conferences with Italian officials today in his campaign to win support for the West European arms pool he has proposed.

Both French and Italian participants in the talks said they were "keenly satisfied" with their progress, but French sources cautioned that "no major decisions can be expected right now."

Responsible sources said Premier Mario Scelba and his Cabinet approve in principle Mendes-France's proposal to form an international agency within the projected seven-nation Western European Union to control the countries' production of arms.

Use Of 'Ex-Convict' Term Questioned

CHICAGO (AP)—An Illinois legislator says he will seek a state law forbidding newspapers, radio and television stations to refer to anyone as an ex-convict if the person has been a law-abiding citizen for 10 years.

'Maybe we'll cut it down to five years," said Rep. Hector A. Brouillet (R-Chicago). "I don't believe it fair to dig up the long-ago past against a person.'

ADRENOSEM, NEW BLEEDING PREVENTIVE, LATEST BOON

By JERRY KLEIN

Written Especially for Central Press and This Newspaper.

AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY "cure" for nosebleed was to soak a linen rag in vinegar, burn it and then inhale the ashes. However, this wouldn't have helped the recent case of a 58-year-old woman who suffered terrible nose bleds every day for week after week.

Despite repeated transfusions, the woman was becoming weaker. She was so worried about a massive, final hemorrhage that she was "unable to blow her nose for fear."

Then the woman was given daily doses of a new discovery called adrenosem. She took the drug for four weeks—and didn't have even one nosebleed during all that time.

This patient was but one of 77 who recently were given test doses of the bleeding preventive by Dr. Daniel A. Sherber of New Rochelle, N. Y. Reporting on these tests in the American Journal of Surgery, Dr. Sherber said that the new drug "appears superior to any similar material that is now available."

Dr. Sherber reported that in some surgical cases, adrenosem halted bleeding in only 20 minutes! He also told of a 55-year-old man who had been suffering constant pulmonary bleeding for six weeks without relief. Within 24 hours after taking the new drug, "all evidence of bleeding stopped" and there was hardly any recurrence for two months.

THE POTENTIAL life-saving value of a drug which safely stops bleeding is made obvious by the fact that America has about 33 million medical cases a year in which loss of blood is a serious complication.

Doctors agree that "there has been an ever-present need throughout history for a systemic hemostat"—that is, a substance which would help keep our blood vessels from leaking.

The discoverers of adrenosem say that it stops bleeding without any of the usual disadvantages of such a drug: thickening the blood, disturbing heart action or raising blood pressure.

Although it was introduced less than one year ago, more than 1,200 hospitals in 45 states are using it and almost 200,000 patients have received doses.

The bleeding preventive is being administered both before and after surgery, and especially in tonsil, prostate and bladder cases where bleeding is a major factor. Of course, operations aren't the only cause of serious loss of blood.

SOMETIMES the small blood vessels are ruptured by infections or improper X-rays. Adrenosem has proved its ability to conserve the life fluid in these cases, too. The internal bleeding which might be caused by the radiation sickness of an atomic war makes the discovery of adrenosem doubly significant.

Years ago, of course, doctors thought they actually benefitted their patient by removing some of their blood. An Eighteenth Century French physician named Guy Patin, for example, once bled himself seven times trying to cure a cold in his head, and in the course of a few days he bled his son 20 times!

Today we know that to waste this precious fluid is to flirt with death. And substances such as adrenosem rightfully take credit for saving many a human life.

Frisco Stingy With Points In College Play

Dons May Gain Berth In NCAA Tourney By High Defense Average

The Associated Press

While college basketball rambles along in what may be its most prolific scoring season—with 100-plus game totals popping up all over—the lads who bump into San Francisco are having a tough time getting 50 points. And that stingy treatment may lead the Dons into the NCAA title tournament as an at-large representative.

The Dons, ranked fifth in this week's Associated Press poll, shackled Santa Clara by a 54-44 count last night for their 11th victory in 12 games and their ninth straight. The lean Santa Clara point production chopped San Francisco's nation leading team defense average to a scant 47.9 allowance a game.

San Francisco, which lost to UCLA 47-40 but reversed it with a 56-44 triumph, went into a seven-minute stall against Santa Clara to the close of the California Basketball Assn. game. Kenny Sears—who has starred for Santa Clara in three NCAA playoffs—was high with 17 points.

Only four other teams ranked among the nation's top 20 were in action—and two of them were knocked off. LaSalle (No. 4) had a rough second half, but finally defeated Muhlenberg 88-79, while George Washington (No. 8) was sending William and Mary to its first Southern Conference defeat 79-65 with Corky Devlin canning 29 points for the Colonials.

Thrice-beaten Cincinnati trounced Dayton (No. 12) 85-78 and Louisville, tied for 20th with Auburn, dropped a home court decision to remarkable Marquette 82-78. It was Marquette's 12th straight victory after an opening defeat.

The LaSalle game had a couple of surprises. First, the Mules moved ahead of the Explorers early in the second half and only a zone defense and some clutch shooting by Alonzo Lewis regained the lead for LaSalle. The second surprise was that Lewis, with 24 points, took the scoring honors away from AllAmerica Tom Gola, who scored 23 along with teammate Charlie Singley for LaSalle.

Duke's Ron Mayer was stopped with seven points before fouling out midway in the second half, but substitute forward Kerky Lamley hit for 20 as the Blue Devils defeated South Carolina 82-64 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Hometown Fetes Ameche Family

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — "The Horse" who carried Wisconsin's football fortunes for four years got a ride himself last night.

Alan Ameche, the Badgers' All-America fullback and the greatest ground gainer in collegiate football history, came home to a banquet in his honor perched on a fire engine at the head of a motorcade. With him were his older son, Brian, just under two, and his wife, Yvonne.

The noisy ride through the streets of his hometown (young Brian enjoyed the screaming sirens more than anybody) was only a prelude, though, to a lucrative evening. By the time it was over the Ameches had netted something like $6,000 in cash and assorted gifts, including a Palomino horse and the title to a brand new automobile.

Two PCL Leaders Play Away; Game At Monroe Homecoming

Pickaway County's two league leaders, Scioto and Ashville, will find themselves up against some tough competition Friday night.

Scioto's Buffaloes, which upset previously undefeated Williamsport last Friday, travel to Pickaway. The Pirates, who have only won two league games, have been improving steadily. With the game being played at Pickaway, the outcome is somewhat in doubt.

Ashville's Broncos gallop up to Five Points to meet Monroe. The Indians, although recording one lone victory in league play, have put up some tough battles. Those who underestimate Monroe may find themselves on the short end of the score when the game is over.

Atlanta's Red Raiders, featuring the high scoring Buzz Gerhardt, play host to Walnut's Tigers. The Tigers are still seeking their first win. Last week, they led Jackson for three quarters before running out of gas.

THE TROJANS OF DARBY, a quintet never to be counted out, play host to New Holland. Darby has had some tough breaks. But even when the Trojans had a 2-3 record, before last week, they had outscored their competition — a very interesting fact to be remembered.

The Warriors of Saltcreek travel to Jackson. The Warriors put up a fine fight against the high scoring Atlanta squad, going down 83 to 72. The Wildcats had to come in from left field to beat Walnut in their last outing.

In an interesting Fairfield County battle, Stoutsville plays host to Amanda. The two quintets will be carrying on their traditional rivalry.

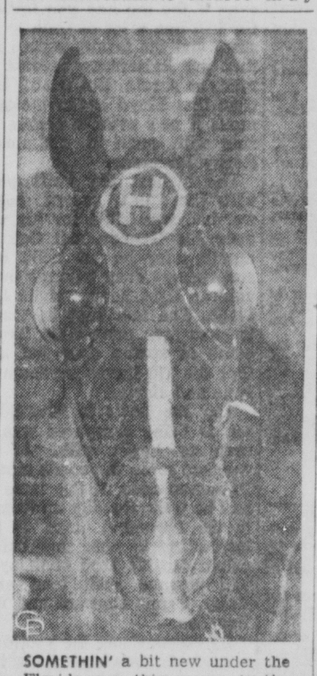

The Ashville-Monroe contest will be the homecoming tilt for the Indians. Vonna Bach will reign as queen.

A dance will follow the game.

College Grid Play To Be More Honest

NEW YORK (AP)—Football will be more honest next fall if the wishes of the NCAA Rules Committee are respected.

Winding up 2 days of deliberations, the committee yesterday adopted six changes in the rules and made two strong appeals to coaches for more honest and careful observance of other rules.

The most important change was in the substitution rule, a short step backward from the "no platoon" rule adopted two years ago. This will permit any player who starts a quarter to leave the game and re-entered once during that quarter. Collaterally, the four-minute "segment" in the second and fourth quarters was eliminated.

The "hideout" was ruled out by a provision that when the ball is spotted and declared ready for play, every offensive player must be within 15 yards of it. On the "tackle eligible" pass, no offensive player may be stationed outside the lineman who becomes eligible.

The "holder" on a place kick now is permitted to rise and run with the ball, pass or kick it. This will keep the defense from rushing too enthusiastically and also eliminate a difficult call when the "holder" raised his knee from the ground for a fake play.

Two minor changes were eliminating the "wig-wag" requirement in the fair catch signal and authorizing the use of shoe cleats with rounded ends.

Furman Streaks To Scoring Title

NEW YORK (AP)—Furman, an old hand at high scoring team assaults, vaulted into the lead this week in offense statistics among the nation's major college basketball teams.

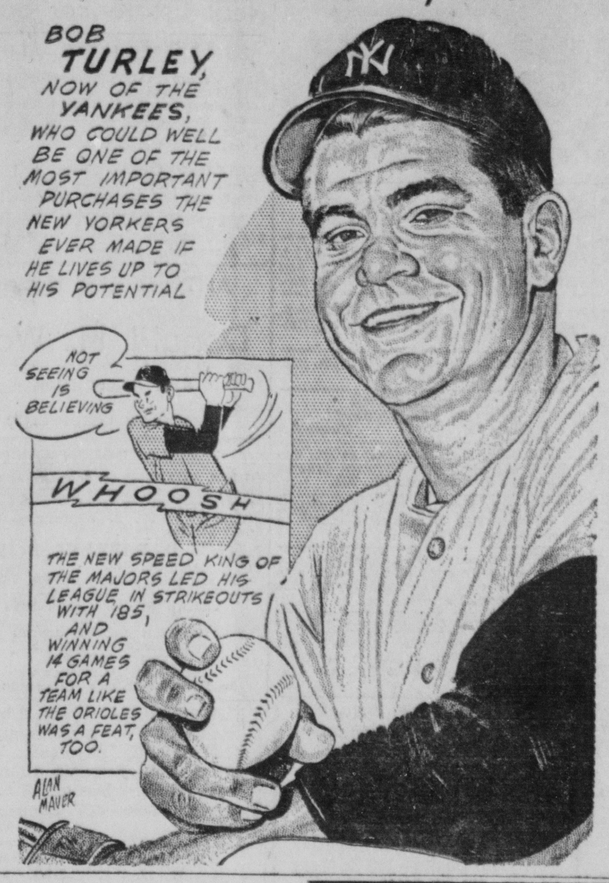

Two 100-point-plus sprees, one an all-time single game record, sent Furman spiraling into first place in pursuit of its third scoring title.

Furman's 154-67 mauling of The Citadel capped the Paladins' rise to an average of 99.2. Furman also had a 102-85 trouncing of Erskine in the records through the streak—as well as a 105-81 reversal by North Carolina State which helped boost the Wolfpack, No. 2 team in this week's Associated Press poll, from 17th to 7th.

Coyote Attacks Oklahoma Woman

OKLAHOMA CITY, (AP)—Cormack P. Hearn, employed at Tinker Air Force Base here, thought his wife was kidding when she telephoned him at work and said frantically: 'I've been attacked by a wolf."

Hearn hurried home. His wife was telling the truth — at least basically. He found a coyote in his front yard.

He killed the animal with a shotgun borrowed from a neighbor. His wife told him she went outside to 'investigate a noise like an animal" and was attacked and bitten on the leg.

The wound was not serious. Mrs. Hearn was given antirabies shots.

Is Excess Fat A Disease?

It might be well to consider excess weight a disease. It is frequently classed as the number one killer of the 20th century. If you suffer the social and physical handicaps of being overweight you must read this letter from Mrs. Ralph Pepiot, R.R. 1, Houston, Ohio. She writes: "As long as I live I will recommend Rennel Concentrate to every overweight person that I know. When I started taking Rennel I weighed 164 lbs. In the few weeks that I have been taking Rennel I have lost 25 lbs. I have never felt better since losing this needless ugly fat, and I look much better, too."

Thousands of others have overcome the social and physical discomfort of being overweight with this effective home recipe. It's easy—no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your druggist and ask for four ounces of liquid Rennel Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Then take two tablespoonfuls twice a day. That's all there is to it. No diets to complicate your meal planning. No expensive vitamins to fortify your system from weakness while going without food for you can eat normally. If the very first bottle doesn't show the simple easy way to lose pounds of bulky fat and help regain slender, more youthful curves — if reducible excess fat doesn't seem to disappear almost like magic just return the empty bottle to the manufacturer for your money back. Insist on and be sure to get Rennel.

Promising Patterson Slow Putting On Heavy Weight

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — It behooves Floyd Patterson to begin putting on some solid weight pretty soon now if the dazzling young boxer from Brooklyn is to live up to the gaudy promises of those who have been saying for the past several years that he can't miss winning the heavyweight title.

The "new Joe Louis" weighed only 166 pounds the other night when he bombed middleweight Willie Troy into submission before a national audience. While it was a very impressive performance in every respect, the fact remained that Patterson was fighting at only a little more than he scaled when he swept the 165-pound championships in the 1952 Olympic Games at Helsinki.

That strikes this corner as slow progress in the weight department, even if the lad has just turned 20. He still has a lot of time to grow, sure, and the family record shows that the Pattersons become large men, as a rule. But it still is high time that Floyd began making his move if he's ever to belong in the ring with such a champion as Rocky Marciano.

The highest the swift puncher with the 19-1 record has yet weighed was 170½ for his victory over Joe Gannon last Oct. 22. A month later he hit 169¼ for his surprisingly easy triumph over the veteran light heavyweight Jimmie Slade. The fact that he was able to shed four pounds for Troy and come in strong does not suggest that the 170 figure represented all bone and sinew.

The Joe Louis to whom Patterson is being compared was a big man to begin with. At 20 he weighed some 15 pounds more than Patterson does at the same stage, and he went steadily up from there to the 200-pound class. It also is interesting to note that before he celebrated his 22nd birthday Louis had stopped such men as Max Baier, Primo Carnera and Paulino Uzcuden.

By comparison, the youthful phenom from Brooklyn finds himself in an awkward spot. He's too big for the middleweight division, in which considerable money can be made, and he's not yet nearly experienced enough to mess with the likes of Archie Moore, the ruler of the 175-pounders. He's got to pull himself up to that table and start eating heavy if he's ever to reach the high income brackets.

Goodwin To Head Pacific Baseball

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Claire V. Goodwin, a one-time second baseman who wants the challenge more than the money, is the new president of the Pacific Coast League.

The unanimous selection of the 59-year-old vice president of Lucky Stores, Inc., was announced yesterday.

"I took the office as a challenge," he said.

"There is a lot of missionary work to be done. I'll go out and meet the people."

Goodwin succeeds Clarence (Pants) Rowland, who quit to join the Chicago Cubs executive staff.

Mickey Owen Gets Release From Sox

BOSTON (AP) — One of the most colorful and varied careers as an active player has ended with the unconditional release of catcher Mickey Owen by the Red Sox.

However, the Sox have given Mickey a contract as a coach for the 1955 season.

Owen thus concludes 20 years as a player in professional baseball. He probably will be working in the bull pen when the season opens.

Mims Angered As Decision Goes To Rocky

CLEVELAND (AP)—Rocky Castellani's unanimous decision over Holly Mims last night almost carried over into a dressing room rematch as Mims and his entourage burst into the winner's quarters screaming "we wuz robbed."

Castellani had been lounging in his robe. His eyes widened in surprise, and then he lunged to his feet, fists clenched, and muttered in flat, cold tones:

"I'll show 'em who won it."

Quick grabs by Castellani's trainers stopped what might very well have become a free-for-all, out of sight of the 5,348 fans in the arena and the television viewers who watched the 12-round bout.

Mims, along with his manager Nick Trottao and his trainers, claimed that Castellani butted him in the clinches and rubbed him on the ropes.

Castellani's manager Al Naiman said later the rhubarb "was only the result of the heat of battle, and disappointment."

"They didn't really mean it. Everything's ironed out now. Everybody's happy."

Crosby Clambake Worth $15,000

More than 250 professional and amateur players are on deck for the 54-hole event, one that is designated the Crosby Clambake.

On hand are the nation's top pros and a wealth of amateurs, most of them more famous as personalities rather than golfers. It appears you get invited to this Crosby party if either you play a top game, entertain, or have no less than three $5,000 automobiles.

Freeman Continues To Pace Scorers

CHICAGO (AP)—Ohio State's Robin Freeman is averaging 10 points per game better than the all-time Big Ten scoring pace set by Don Schlundt of Indiana.

Official Big Ten statistics today showed Freeman with a 37-point average in two league games. Schlundt, who is second in scoring with a 31.3 average in three games, set the Big Ten record average of 27.1 last year.

The lofty Hoosier continues to increase his career scoring record as he starts his fourth season. It is now expanded to 1,176, far ahead of the old mark of 1,027 by Ohio State's Paul Ebert.

Saddler Agrees To Defend Title

NEW YORK (AP)—Sandy Saddler has agreed to take his featherweight title out of the deep freeze for a Feb. 25 defense here against Red Top Davis.

Saddler hasn't given anybody a crack at the crown since the September night in 1951 when Willie Pep "quit" in the other corner, a ninth-round TKO victim. Of course, Sandy was in the Army for two years and didn't get out until last April.

Davis, veteran of 107 fights with a 58-47-2 record, is 31. three years older than the champion, who has a gaudy 137-12-2 career mark.

Relief Costs In County Jump $18,000 From 1953 To 1954

Increase Noted In Number Of Cases Handled

Various Conditions Held Responsible For Added Costs

Pickaway County relief costs jumped approximately $18,000 annual in 1954 as compared with 1953.

Figures released by Miss Pauline Roese, director of public assistance for the county, show in 1954, $75,491.70 was spent for 1,318 relief cases. During 1953, the figure was $57,399.14 for 998 cases.

Miss Roese said the rise was not unusual. She noted that almost all other counties in the state showed an increase in the number of relief cases. However, she added, Pickaway County is a little above average.

During 1954, the 1,318 cases represented 3,927 people or an average of 2.97 persons per case. In 1953, the 998 cases accounted for 2,351 people, an average of 2.35 persons per case.

OF THE TOTAL NUMBER of people cared for under the relief program here, an additional 249 in 1954 and 201 in 1953 were classified at medical care cases only. The original figures included home care with hospital and medical care.

Another increase was noted in the money spent for medical and hospital care only. In 1954, this amounted to $24,073.76 while in 1953 it was $19,956.77.

The total costs spent for relief in the county include home, hospital and medical care plus administration. Home care takes care of only necessities such as food, rent, fuel, utilities, clothing, etc.

Miss Roese pointed out that all money for county relief comes only from public utilities excise taxes. The state matches this amount to make up the allowance for county relief.

"No direct county money is used," Miss Roese remarked. "This includes money in the general fund. Many people do not realize this fact."

ALTHOUGH THERE ARE a few chronic reliefers, Miss Roese explained, most people are anxious to get back on their own feet. For the most part, these people need help in getting over a "rough spot".

For example, more than just a few workers are very much affected by season work in construction and canning factories, just to name two. Also, there are some who are only capable of certain types of work.

Miss Roese detailed a number of cases to show her point. One concerned a man with three children, whose wife is expecting a fourth, who cannot hold even the simplest of jobs for more than a couple of weeks.

Another case concerns that of a man who was apprehended for breaking and entering. The man and his wife had two children. Although he is in his late teens, he has the mentality of a 9 1-2 year old child.

Although these people could do certain kinds of work, they are definitely limited. And yet, they have families to support.

MENTALITY is not always a factor. There is the case of a farmer, tending some acreage for $27.50 a week. Although the land lord gave him a tiny house, the money is hardly enough to keep him, his wife and their children.

When it comes to farming, there are many who get paid only for the days that they work. When the weather is bad, there is no work—and no pay.

Miss Roese explained that applicants are screened very thoroughly. One reason for the success of the relief program in Pickaway County, she noted, is that no cash grants are given out.

In certain areas where actual cash is given out, chronic reliefers tend to spring up. Money received is rarely used for it intended purpose and sometimes is consumed at the local tavern.

In order to further help those who really need aid, Miss Roese pointed out that strict budgets are worked out to make what little money there is go the furthest.

There is always hope for those who need it, she concluded.

Ohioan Sentenced In Hoosier Theft

VINCENNES, Ind. (AP)—Carl McMahon, 25, of Portsmouth, Ohio, pleaded guilty yesterday to burglary in the recent $2,500 robbery of a Vincennes supermart.

He received a two-to-five year sentence in the Indiana Reformatory. McMahon and five other men were rarested here last week after a series of robberies in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois.

Parkersburg Opens Memorial Bridge

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. (AP)—Parkersburg dedicated its $6 million memorial bridge yesterday.

Ceremonies opened the mile and a quarter span across the Ohio River to Belpre, Ohio.

Construction of the bridge began 22 months ago and, although the city of Parkersburg considers itself "sponsor" of the project, it was financed with private capital through the sale of revenue bonds.

Dedicated as a memorial to war veterans from the Parkersburg area, the bridge at present is not part of a main highway system, although officials say state or federal roads eventually may use it.

Jury Nearly Set For Jackson Trial

JACKSON (AP)—Selection of an alternate juror today will complete the panel in the trial of Jackson County Sheriff David L. Trago, being tried on one of 17 indictments on moral charges.

Pickaway County Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff of Circleville, sitting by assignment, swore in a jury of seven men and five women late yesterday. Judge Radcliff replaces Common Pleas Judge James E. Kinnison, who stepped down for the Trago trial.

Approximately one-third of the area of the United States is classified as forest.

Telephone Slugs Bring Trouble

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Tom Patton Williams, 23, told Federal Judge T. Whitfield Davidson he used 51 washers the size of 25-cent coins to make long-distance telephone calls to his girl friend.

She lives in California and her last name is Love, Williams said.

Dayton Preacher Freed By Jury

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—A circuit court jury here yesterday acquitted Cardell E. Hackler, 34, assistant pastor of the International Holiness Tabernacle, Dayton, Ohio.

4-Year Draft Extension Is Sought By Eisenhower

Taxpayer Said Willing To Shell Out For Roads

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gov. Robert F. Kennon of Louisiana told a highway conference today taxpayers will shell out money for road construction 'less grudgingly" than for any other purpose.

The taxpayer is convinced he is really getting "something for his money" when roads are built, Kennon told a national conference on highway financing sponsored by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, head of the advisory committee which recommended to President Eisenhower a $101-billion federal-state highway program this week, was another scheduled speaker.

The Clay committee called for a new $27 billion program that would develop a 40,000-mile network of interstate highways over the next 10 years. All but $2 billion would be provided by the federal government through a bond-issuing federal highway corporation.

AS HEAD OF the Governors' Council, Kennon delivered to Eisenhower last month a report from the nation's governors which embodied many of the proposals set forth by the Clay committee.

Kennon said he didn't think construction of toll roads would meet the problem.

A study of the situation in Louisiana showed, he said, "that only in a few instances would a toll road be a paying proposition."

Meanwhile, in New Orleans, Sen. Case (R-SD) said there are two ways to keep a proposed interstate highway system from curtail-

French Chief Plans Talks In Germany

ROME (AP) — French Premier Pierre Mendes-France leaves today for a visit to West Germany and talks with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer on postwar French-German differences. The energetic premier carries with him partial Italian support for his controversial European arms pool plan.

During two days of talks here with Premier Mario Scelba and other Italian leaders, the French premier won agreement-in-principle for his plan to set up a seven-nation agency to control arms output and distribution within the projected Western European Union. The two nations also announced accords on several economic questions, involving trade, industrial cooperation and immigration.

Despite the promise of partial support, Mendes - France reportedly was disappointed in the reception given the arms pool plan by Italian leaders. Sources indicated he had hoped for more enthusiastic backing, which might aid him in getting an OK from a less receptive West Germany.

The plan, designed to prevent West Germany from overarming within the WEU, comes up next Monday before a meeting in Paris of the seven nations which signed the still-unratified WEU treaty. In addition to France, Italy and West Germany, they include the Netherlands, Britain, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Mother Testifies Against Man, 25

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jesse McWhorter, 25, whose mother testified against him, was convicted in U. S. District Court yesterday of bank robbery and was sentenced by Judge John H. Druffel to 20 years in prison.

McWhorter was charged with the $596 holdup of the Hewitt-Woodburn Savings and Loan Co. here last Sept. 15.

After the verdict was returned, Judge Druffel told the jury the man's mother did not want to testify against him but that she feared he might kill someone.

Teamplay Speeds Planning On Lake

Smooth and steady progress in planning for a fishing lake a short distance east of Circleville was reported Wednesday night after a meeting of the Pickaway County Farmers and Sportsmen's Association.

Bob Wolf, secretary of the association, disclosed that details of the project have been falling into place with a high degree of coordination among all concerned. The smooth teamplay now established is in sharp contrast to the prolonged controversy that stalled the work over a period of years.

Next step, it was explained, will be to determine the subsoil in accordance with revised blueprints.

After long debate over the size of lake possible within the range of funds available, plans were drawn for a lake with a water area covering 125 acres.

WHEN THE state obtains the subsoil data, it will then be apparent whether a few more acres will have to be purchased from Dewey Black. Black owns property on the edge of the land already purchased by the state and is regarded as one of the leading boosters for completion of the lake.

As soon as weather permits, heavy equipment can be moved across his property to speed up the work.

Outstanding among the bright prospects for the lake was the complete harmony on all sides as the project continues to take form.

Following the meeting by the sportsmen's group, Wolf praised the efforts being made by Ohio Department of Natural Resources Director A. W. Marion. "I know for a positive fact," Wolf said, "that Mr. Marion is doing everything within his power and authority to complete the lake as soon as possible. And that should be good news for all of us.

"As soon as the weather clears sufficiently, work with the heavier equipment will begin. Meanwhile, many of the paper details and preliminary transactions are being handled to clear the decks.

"At one time, over a number of years, there was a great deal of controversy connected with the job. But now there is no friction whatsoever.

"EVERYBODY is moving ahead on the best possible schedule, and we want the people of Pickaway County to know it."

Wednesday night's meeting of the sportsmen's association was the first held under the leadership of Al Gabriel, new president of the organization. The association has spearheaded efforts to have the fishing lake completed.

Bridge Abutment Believed Bombed

PORTSMOUTH (AP) — Recent explosions heard by residents of Elfort, a small community on the Lawrence-Scioto county line, may have been caused by an attempt to dynamite a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad bridge abutment.

P. P. Glenn, a detective for the railroad, and deputy sheriffs have been investigating the blasts. Glenn said he had found a hole about two and a half feet in diameter at the base of one abutment of a trestle over the Little Scioto River, and that it appeared to have been caused by a dynamite explosion. He said there were signs the dynamite had been placed there.

Boys Smart, But Not For Very Long

CHILLICOTHE (AP)—A couple of boys, 12 and 14, walked off the bridge between the county jail and the Ross County courthouse. The older one asked the court stenographer: "Is the judge in?"

Arthur Clum, the stenographer, directed them to the office of Common Pleas Judge Howard Goldsberry.

"Judge Stevens?" inquired the older boy again.

"He's downstairs — last office on the right," said Judge Goldsberry. So, off the boys trotted.

That's the way two youngsters accused of petit larceny escaped from the juvenile detention room. But with the aid of their parents, they were rounded up quickly.

Drivers Urged To Be Careful; Highways Icy

Motorists have been advised to use caution when traveling in the county due to icy road conditions.

Most of the main roads have been cleared but there are a number of slippery areas. Ice has formed underneath some of the snow, making driving hazardous in spots.

Trucks of the state and county highway departments in Circleville have been out since midnight Wednesday. Salt, calcium chloride and sand have been spread.

City streets were slippery earlier but are now in better condition.

SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES report that snow drifting across the roads has made driving conditions difficult in some areas. They report only one minor accident since the snow began to fall. There were no injuries.

Route 23 north and south and Route 22 east and west are in "fair" condition. Heavy traffic on these routes has worked out most of the snow and ice. But more snow is predicted for the area. Authorities here urge extreme driving caution.

Air Force Lauds Ohio Congressman

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. William E. Hess (R-Ohio) yesterday was thanked by the Air Force for investigations that turned up a personnel problem in the General Electric plant at Evendale, Ohio.

Harold E. Talbott, secretary of the Air Force, wrote Hess that as chairman of the House Defense Activities Subcommittee in the last Congress, he had helped correct a problem "conducive of low morale, dissension and unrest."

Hess' inquiry was into the firing of two men he said helped expose an officer who later pleaded guilty to embezzlement. The two were later reinstated.

Hammarskjold Heading For U. N. Offices

The big silver Super Constellation landed at 5:14 a. m. His personal aide William Rannalo told newsmen: "You're out of luck, boys—he's staying in bed. He's very tired."

Hammarskjold presisently has refused any comment on his talks with Chou En-lai, Red China's Premier and foreign minister, on the fate of the 11 Americans and other U.N. prisoners.

Rannalo said he doubted that Hammarskjold would report to the U. N. today.

The plane stopped briefly at Stead Air Force Base here before continuing to New York.

Hammarskjold has maintained a stony silence on the outcome of his mission at every point since he emerged from behind the Bamboo Curtain—at Hong Kong, Tokyo and Honolulu, which he left last night wearing a pink sunburn from an afternoon on the beach.

AT EACH STOP on his return flight Hammarskjold has made clear that he would have nothing to say until he reported to the U.N. General Assembly, which sent him to seek freedom for 11 U. S. airmen jailed as "spies." The airmen were captured in the Korean War.

Hammarskjold met four times in Peiping with Chou and other Communist officials. In Washington, the State Department said it is completely in the dark on the substance of Hammarskjold's efforts.

But Senate GOP Leader Knowland said, "I think the Reds may be trying to get us into another prolonged Panmunjom which may drag on for years. The test is whether these men are released and they haven't been."

Toledoan, 18, Sentenced To Die

A panel of three judges yesterday found him guilty of first-degree murder in the woodland slaying near here last Aug. 12. The judges deliberated one hour.

The youth testified he raped the girl in a woods near her home after a 12-year-old boy companion had knocked her unconscious with a club. He said he stabbed her when she regained consciousness.

REA Costs Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rural Electrification Administration said today there was a 5 per cent drop in 1954 in the unit cost of electrical power furnished residential users by rural power concerns which it financed. The cost averaged 3.06 cents a kilowatt hour.

No Guarantee Seen Chiang Won't Involve U S. In War

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Sparkman (D-Ala) said today there is no way to spell out "100 per cent insurance" that Chiang Kai-shek will not seek to involve this country in war by provoking a Communist attack, but that he regards a note signed Dec. 10 as a "promise" from Chiang.

He referred to a note signed by Secretary of State Dulles and Chinese Nationalist Premier George K. C. Yeh, pledging the United States and Chiang's forces not to launch in the Formosa area without "joint agreement" any military actions not strictly self-defensive.

The note was signed eight days after the new U.S.-Formosa Mutual Defense Treaty. Sparkman said he regards it as the best guarantee possible that the pact would not involve this nation in a war over Formosa, the island 100 miles off China which constitutes most of Chiang's Republic of China.

Sparkman commented in advance of a closed-door session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee called to hear a briefing on the situation by Dulles.

It was Dulles' first date with a Democratic - controlled congressional group, but Sparkman, a member, said the secretary would get "a friendlier reception than he's been getting from a Republican-controlled committee."

The U.S.-Formosa treaty commits this country to "act to meet the common danger" in the event of any armed attack on Formosa or the nearby Pescadores Islands and to recognize such an attack as dangerous to U. S. peace."

The actual language of the note signed by Dulles and Yeh was not made public at the time of its signing, but it has been furnished to the Senate for use in connection with its consideration of the treaty.

This is the key language:

"In view of the obligations of the two parties . . . and of the fact that the use of force from either of these areas by either of the parties affects the other, it is agreed that such use of force will be a matter of joint agreement, subject to action of an emergency character which is clearly an exercise of the inherent right of self-defense."

The areas referred to are Formosa and the Pescadores, specifically included in the treaty, and other islands such as the Tachens which are not included.

Commissioners OK Temporary Appropriations

Pickaway County commissioners announced Thursday that temporary appropriations have been passed to meet current bills and salaries through the first quarter of 1955.

They said the action was necessary because data on estimated revenue for 1955 has not as yet been compiled for the commission. The data is expected shortly, but the commission held a special meeting to pass the temporary appropriations Wednesday because of the approaching Saturday pay day, it was explained.

The commissioners said not all of the anticipated expenditures are covered by the temporary appropriations passed thus far, but that no serious difficulty was expected in allocating funds to cover all the county's needs for the first quarter.

The action taken Wednesday—plus the steps remaining to be completed—would provide needed funds up to April 1.

In connection with the commission's action, it was pointed out that the question of salary increases for any county branches will have to wait until the end of the first quarter. The commissioners declined to say what, if any, pay hikes would be considered at that time.

Most Of Weather Today: Cold, Dry

CHICAGO (AP) — Cold and dry weather prevailed over most of the United States today.

Cold Canadian air dropped temperatures from 5 to 20 degrees from the Dakotas and Minnesota southward to northern Texas. The cold weather extended eastward into Wisconsin and Illinois.

Temperatures were between zero and 10 degrees below zero in the Northern Plains. But it was colder from the upland valleys of the central Rockies. One of the lowest readings early today was 20 below at Fraser, Colo., high up in the Rockies.

Polio Defeated By New Mother

ATHENS, Ohio (AP)—Last September, Mrs. Richard Glover, 39, mother of two children and expecting a third, was stricken with bulbar polio, the type that often is fatal.

Today, she presented her school bus driver husband a son.

Attending physicians said she has recovered completely from the bout with polio. Her son is healthy and the birth was normal.

CLEVELAND (AP)—Lorenz Mljac, 73-year-old city gardener who says he does not believe in banks, is out $3,870.

He told police a thief entered his home Tuesday and took $3,435 he hid in his refrigerator and another $435 he kept in a night stand.

Mljac waited until yesterday, he said, to notify detectives of the theft because he was hunting his .32 caliber revolver. But he found that gone too.

GOP Senators Certain Ike To Run; Democrats Disagree

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several Republican senators said today they think President Eisenhower is reluctant to run for reelection but will be convinced he ought to before the 1956 GOP convention.

Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) on the other hand, said he is betting Eisenhower will retire. But Sen. Humphrey (D-Minn) said it is "far too early to speculate."

Monroney, who said he had won five hats betting former President Truman would not run again in 1952, said he is basing his predictions on reports that Mrs. Eisenhower doesn't want the President to be a candidate again.

"Mrs. Truman didn't want President Truman to run and he didn't," Monroney said. "I don't think Mrs. Eisenhower wants President Eisenhower to run and I'm betting that he won't."

Eisenhower was again noncommittal when asked at his news conference yesterday about his plans for 1956.

SENATORS Carlson (R-Kan) and Bender (R-Ohio), who call themselves staunch Eisenhower supporers, said they don't have any doubt the President will be the party's standardbearer in 1956.

Sen. Watkins (R-Utah) said, 'I don't think he wants it, but I think he'll be the nominee."

Senators Allott (R-Colo) and Clifford Case (R-NJ), elected last November with the President's active support, said they assume Eisenhower is going to run and will have no GOP opposition.

Eisenhower told newsmen he hopes he never becomes sufficiently selfcentered that he fails to respond to a call to duty. But he said the individual involved has to decide for himself just where his duty lies.

Block Of Dimes Has $425 Goal For Saturday

Circleville's contribution to the campaign to fight polio will be increased by at least $425 if the city's sixth annual Block of Dimes reaches its 1955 goal.

The local fund-raising event will start at noon on Saturday at Court and Main Streets, sponsored by the Circleville American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps.

The corps has raised nearly $2,100 in the previous five years. In 1953 the Legionnaires hit their high mark of $629.25.

Corps members will "hawk" for money in any way, shape or form. Any coins given will be placed on the sidewalk end to end going west on W. Main St. When they reach the first alley, they will reverse direction and keep on repeating this method.

ANYONE WISHING to contribute a dollar bill will "purchase" a block one foot long. The donor's name will be written on the pavement.

All the money collected will be turned over to the March of Dimes and be credited accordingly. The event will last until 9 p. m.

Corps members hope that the recently fallen snow will melt enough by Saturday noon so as not to interfer with the event.

Fields Say They Prefer Life Of Reds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Noel Field has notified the State Department he and his wife have decided to forsake the United States and remain in Communist Hungary, which imprisoned them for five years.

Field's decision, not unexpected by the State Department, was relayed in a handwritten letter received two days ago at Budapest by U. S. Minister Christian M. Ravndal. The letter was disclosed last night by Department Press Officer Henry Suydam.

But officials fully expect Noel's brother Hermann to come home again. Hermann, 44, was freed by Communist Poland late in October. He too had served five years in a Red prison. He was issued a U.S. passport and is recuperating in Switzerland. A Cleveland architect, he ran afoul of the Communists in Warsaw while hunting Noel.

Noel, 50, is a controversial figure on both sides of the Iron Curtain. He has been accused by the Reds of being a spy and in Washington hearings as being a consort of Communists.

Reds in Eastern Europe accused Noel of being an American agent, but these charges were washed out when he and his wife Herta were freed last Nov. 17.

Pay Increases For 'Career' Men Requested

Powerful Military Reserve Also Labeled As 'Must' For U. S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower today asked Congress to extend the draft law four years, grant pay increases to "career" servicemen and create a powerful military reserve to deal with any "aggressor so criminally unwise as to attempt an atomic attack."

The President set out the administration's military manpower program in two special messages to the lawmakers, saying the measures he proposed would give this country the "proper military posture" for the first time in peacetime.

On pay, he proposed increases only for men willing to serve longer than a minimum time, saying it is necessary to maintain "the experienced hard core of a modern fighting force."

Calling for a "selective" 'rise, Eisenhower said there should be no increase for officers in the first three years of their service and none in the first two years for enlisted men.

This would mean no pay rise for two-year draftees or for young reserve officers putting in only their obligated time.

THE PRESIDENT said the aggregate increase he proposed would hike the present service payroll by about 6.7 per cent for salary and allowances.

At present the government is paying out about $10 billion for those purposes. On that basis, the added cost would be about $705 million a year.

Eisenhower devoted one message of 1,800 words to the pay question and a second of 2,000 words to his

Presbyterian Merger Hits Snag In South

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The chances of a merger of the three United States branches of the Presbyterian Church appeared somewhat dim today as the result of opposi? tion from the South.

The union would unite the three groups now in the process of voting on the proposal, the United Presbyterian Church, the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. and the Presbyterian Church in the United States (Southern). They have a membersdip of 3 million.

Unanimous approval of the three is necessary.

The Southern branch and the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. separated in 1860 as a result of the Civil War. Basic cause for the division was over the slavery issue.

Thirteen Southern presbyteries have voted on the merger issue and 12 have opposed it. A three-quarter majority of the 84 presbyteries in the Southern branch is necessary for the group's approval.

Only ten more negative votes are thus needed among the Southern presbyteries to kill the plan and one of their leaders said, "We will get those in the next two weeks."

Meanwhile, in Philadelphia, Dr. Walton Rankin, publicity manager of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. said 40 out of 256 presbyteries of his branch had voted for union. He said he has received no reports of any presbyteries in his branch that voted "no."

Columnist's Dad Dies In Defiance

DEFIANCE (AP)—Arthur F. Wilson, 66, father of syndicated columnist Earl Wilson of the New York Post, died here last night at the River Rest Home where he had been a patient. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Stricken with a heart condition in 1952, Wilson had been a semi-invalid. He and his family moved here in 1946 and Wilson worked as a real estate agent. Previously the family lived at nearby Sherwood and Fort Wayne, Ind.

Survivors include his son, widow and two daughters, Mrs. Willard Witte of Fort Wayne and Mrs. Peter Oberman of San Diego, Calif.

Taxpayer Said Willing To Shell Out For Roads

ing construction of needed primary, secondary and urban roads.

Describing problems faced by the President's Highway Advisory Committee, Case told the American Road Builders Assn. that "one big one will be to demonstrate that the completion of the interstate system will not delay or interfere with the building of the badly needed roads that are not a part of the interstate system.

There are two answers to this question.

"First, that relieving the states of matching on the interstate will release funds for construction of other systems.

"Second, that the reimbursement for funds already spent on the interstate system will make possible some 'lieu' road in neglected sections."

Case said Eisenhower's proposed $101 billion interstate system can fit into a framework set up by 1954 Federal Aid Act. The road builders end their convention today with election of officers.

Judge Labels New Federal Tax Form As 'Atrocious'

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Circuit Judge Dale Souter says he has come face to face with the most perplexing problem of his career—the new income tax form.

The form so vexed the judge that he wrote a letter of objection to Rep. Ford (R-Mich), Sen. Potter (R-Mich) and Sen. McNamara (D-Mich).

The judge wrote that he thought the income tax statement forms are "to say the least, atrocious."

"It seems the Congress certainly should be able to find the necessary personnel to prepare a form that the ordinary taxpayer can understand and fill out himself without paying an expert to interpret it for him," Judge Souter stated.

He said he has completed his return but added he now is seeking an accountant to verify it.

Speeding Motorist Perils Lives, But Other Faults Also Take Toll

Recalling Ohio's poor showing in the nation's highway death over the year-end holidays, safety leaders in Pickaway County and elsewhere have returned their criticism of speeding motorists.

But one of the country's biggest insurance companies warns that other driving faults can be as dangerous. Two-thirds of the nation's fatal traffic accidents occur at legal or slower speeds, according to the firm's family economics bureau.

Exceeding the speed limit was involved in one of every six fatal accidents in 1953. "Driving too fast for the circumstances but without exceeding a posted limit" accounted for another one-sixth of all fatal accidents. Thus, traveling at 20 miles an hour through a situation where you should creep at five or ten can be as dangerous as doing 80 on the open highway, the insurance people point out, and is just as illegal in most areas.

Reckless speed kills thousands, and must be curbed, says the insurance firm's warning. But the "hoggish driving" group of offenses-ignoring traffic controls, etc. -accounted for approximately 22 per cent of the fatal accidents in 1953, considerably more than were due to breaking a speed limit.

WHILE "DRUNK" driving was charged up in only six per cent of fatal accidents, another 12 per cent of drivers involved in fatal accidents had been drinking to some extent. Safety officials agree that many of these additional tragedies undoubtedly would not have occurred had driver reactions not been slowed or overconfidence not been boosted by even modest amounts of alcohol, causing other driving offenses to be committed.

Improper passing, following too closely and miscellaneous wrong driving practices were involved in some 15 per cent of fatal accidents. All of the above figures are based on the averages of 150 cities and 22 states reporting to the National Safety Council, the insurance company emphasizes.

Advent of radar is making speed limit violations still easier to detect and convict. To discourage various other equally dangerous offenses is often much more difficult, and deserve full public attention and support, the insurance firm urges.

Unmarked patrol cars have made undermanned police forces much more effective in detecting and discouraging dangerous driver offenses. Motion picture cameras offer a promising new scientific weapon for "nailing" many bad violations. The knowledge that such gadgets are on the prowl in unmarked cars provides powerful deterrent to the reckless or hoggish driver.

Systematic programs of spot-checking passing motorists for liquor symptoms and missing licenses have proven so effective in reducing drinks before driving that much pressure generally has to be withstood from hard-hit bars and from thirsty but uneasy motorists, the insurance company says.

"Drunkometer" equipment has made detection and conviction of drunk drivers surer and easier, but its use as court evidence has yet to be established by law in a number of localities.

WORKHOUSE sentences, even very brief ones, dealt out rigidly to first offenders in the dangerous violation groups, have brought striking reductions in traffic casualties in various communities.

Widespread publicity given by press, radio and television has multiplied the effects of safety-law enforcement campaigns, says the insurance company's report. When such publicity slackens, results usually decline sharply, even though authorities continue the drive without abatement.

Township Officials Set For Convention

Intensive training in township government will be given trustees and clerks when the Ohio State Association of Township Trustees and Clerks holds its 27th Annual Convention in Columbus, beginning next Thursday. About 1,750 public officials are expected to attend the two and a half day schooling, according to State Secretary Charles P. Baker Jr., of Painesville.

In addition to question and answer forums conducted by a state examiner from the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, there will be panel discussions and short talks by selected members of the organization. Subjects to be given special attention are roads, township clerks, fire departments, annexation and incorporation, cemeteries, new township buildings and zoning.

Dean Clarence Manion of South Bend, Indiana, noted speaker on Americanism, will address the convention Friday afternoon.

Other speakers will include:

Robert F. Eastman, president of the County Engineers' Association; Fred J. Milligan, Columbus attorney, Troy Kost, secretary of the Illinois Township Officials; Dr. William B. Guitteau, historian and author, and Mack Sauer, Leesburg editor and humorist. State officials, in addition to the governor, will include Attorney General C. William O'Neill, State Auditor James A. Rhodes, State Fire Marshall Charles R. Scott and Roger Cloud, speaker of the House of Representatives.

SUPREME COURT Judge James Garfield Stewart will speak at the Old Timers Luncheon Thursday noon and Chief Justice Carl V. Weygandt will address the annual banquet Thursday evening.

Prior to formal opening of the convention, county association presidents and secretaries will hold a dinner meeting Wednesday evening. C. V. Neal is association president for Pickaway County, and Bill Goode serves as county association secretary.

Air Crash Being Probed For Cause

BURLINTON, Ky. (AP)—Twisted, shattered wreckage and airport records were all that remained today to possibly explain how 15 persons died yesterday in an airplane collision only a couple of miles from the busy Greater Cincinnati Airport.

A TWA airliner, a Martin Skyliner, bound from Cincinnati to Dayton and Cleveland, collided with a privately owned DC3. Thirteen persons, including three crew members, were killed on the airliner. Two others died as the DC3 plunged to earth.

The planes crashed on snow-covered hillsides along the Ohio River, about a half mile apart. There were no survivors.

Almost 12 hours after the accident, Lewis Reinbold of Pittsburgh aviation safety agent for the Civil Aeronautics Administration, issued a statement that the pilot of the DC3 "did not file a flight plan or make any contact with the CAA's facilities en route."

An investigation was being continued today.

Reinbold said the TWA plane made a normal takeoff and was reported to be flying on instruments in the overcast.

The DC3 was en route to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., from Battle Creek, Mich., with Arthur Werkhaven, Sturgis, Mich., as the pilot and Edward Agner, Battle Creek, as copilot.

Captain of the TWA plane was J. W. Quinn, Belleville, Mich. The first officer was Robert K. Childress, Ann Arbor, Mich.

He said extension of the Selective Service law, due to expire June 30, "is necessary because experience demonstrates that active armed forces of the size we must maintain cannot be raised by voluntary enlistments alone."

He said too an effective reserve program to provide a pool of trained fighting men is necessary because:

"We cannot possibly keep armed and in uniform the total forces that might ultimately be required in an all-out war. The inescapable burdens would endanger the liberties and the economic system we are determined to defend."

The draft extension and the plan to build up a ready reserve of civilians would require some form of active duty or military training for virtually all young men.

BEFORE REACHING 19, or in some cases before the 20th birthday, a youth would have a variety of choices:

1. He could volunteer for the service of his choice, serving three years as a regular in the Army or Marine Corps, or four years in the Navy or the Air Force. His total military obligation including reserve service would be eight years.

2. He could volunteer to take six months of intensive military training, and thereafter remain active in the National Guard or reserve for an additional 9½ years. He still could be drafted if he failed to maintain his standing in the Guard or reserves.

3. He could, before reaching 19, enter the reserves direct under a commitment to go on full active duty, when called, for at least 24 months in the Navy or four years in the Air Force.

4. He could wait until he is drafted for 24 months, after which he would remain in the reserves for six years.

Chief State Fair Demand Said Farm Machinery Show

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Visitors to the Ohio State Fair have demanded: "Bring back the farm machinery."

So says Dr. Harold Capener, rural sociologist at Ohio State University, who last night made public a survey of fair visitors last fall. The call for more farm machinery exhibits was greatest, he said.

The report was presented today to the Ohio Fair Managers Assn., which ends its three - day conference here today.

Earlier in the week, the Columbus Tractor Club, which represents most of the major farm machinery manufacturers and distributors, announced it would again pass up the Ohio State Fair this year.

The group has been dissatisfied with the amount of display space made available for farm machinery. Fair officials had offered to consult with club members and provide what space was available.

The state fair report and selection of the best 1954 fair top today's final events. About 1,000 delegates are attending.

A. L. Sorensen, Ohio's director of agriculture, and State Fair Manager Sam Cashman cooperated in the fair survey. Dr. Capener said 845 adults were interviewed.

Yesterday the delegates settled down to a series of group conferences, highlighted by discussion of possible lowering of county fair admission prices.

No action was taken. Some advocated cutting prices to 25 cents and other suggestions called for elimination of admission costs.

They include:

Division A—Richland, Muskingum and Cuyahoga; Division B—Darke, Crawford, Hancock, Knox and Wood; Division C — Ashland, Champaign, Hardin, Shelby and Williams; Division D — Morgan, Wyandot and Plain City, independent.

Dr. Capener's report cautioned that his findings on the state fair, termed in the report "the big show window," would not necessarily apply to county fairs.

Sidewalk Clerics Irk Innkeeper

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A churchgoing tavern operator complained yesterday to the City Council that sidewalk preachers are harming business.

Ministerial students persist in preaching sermons in front of her tavern door, Mrs. M. E. Johnson said. Customers, whether or not they're swayed by the Gospel, can hardly push past the preachers, she said.

Mrs. Johnson said she was a church member herself, but added that she did not think the churches should interfere with her business.

City Atty. Rhinehart Rouer said he believed police could order the preachers away from Mrs. Johnson's tavern door.

Latin-American Nations Seek Peace In Costa Rica

SAN JOSE Costa Rica (AP)—The United States and her Latin-American neighbors stepped up peacemaking efforts today in the wake of spreading fighting and widespread small air attacks in Costa Rica.

The State Department announced in Washington it was immediately ordering U. S. planes to the battle area to make "pacific observation flights" requested by the Organization of American States. The OAS hoped such flights would halt air raids on Costa Rican towns.

A five-nation commission from the OAS was due in San Jose today from Panama for an on-the-spot investigation of the outbreak in northern Costa Rica, which Costa Rican President Jose Figueres blamed on exiles and "mercenaries" trained and equipped in neighboring Nicaragua.

HE SAID HE had ordered all rebels crossing his borders disarmed and all Costa Ricans in the country rounded up.

Somoza also challenged Figueres to meet him at the border and settle their long-time feud with a duel between the two of them.

Fighting flared at half a dozen points yesterday and planes strafed nine towns including the capital. Unofficial estimates placed the rebel force at 400 men.

The towns of Pensas, Blanca and the small port of Puerty Soley all near the Nicaraguan border, were reported in enemy hands, but the general staff voiced confidence it could handle the situation.

The staff said a lone fighter San Jose, machinegunning buildings near the president's residence. No casualties were reported. The civil guard said the plane, a World War II P47 described as "a Venezuelan plane which came from Nicaragua," was reported shot down as it headed north.

Hal Boyle Says:

Gamblers Are Interesting

By SAUL PETT
(For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK (AP)—You meet so many interesting people in a gambling house, and not all of them cost you money.

The most fascinating, I think, are the shills, those delightful Barrymores of dice, roulette, blackjack or whatever game happens to be dragging and needs a shot in the arm.

As you may know, shills are the genial fakers who are paid to drum up trade by playing with the house's money, to appear to be having the time of their lives in the hope that their thrills will prove contagious.

On a recent trip to Puerto Rico, where gambling is legal, I studied the shills. You understand, of course, that the only reason I went to the casinos was to gather material for a news column.

Shills are easy to recognize. They open and close the joint. When they run out of chips, they retire to the men's room, smoke a cigarette, and somehow always return with another (or maybe the same) $20 bill for fresh chips.

When they win, their eyes flash with triumph, and their chips are piled up prominently in front of them. When they lose, their eyes darken, but never into the blackness of real despair because, after all, despair is contagious.

The kindly old banker always wore an understanding expression. As you paid for chips, his eyes seemed to wish you luck. When you lost, he looked sad but, still, encouraging. Always encouraging. When you won, he beamed. He couldn't have been more delighted that you were taking is dough.

Among the players, I noticed several types.

There was the young couple just of the cruise ship. She seemed taut and breathless. He tried his best to be casual, but his hand shook. She stood close to him. He rolled the dice, made two or three passes and you could see her tugging mentally at his elbow. But his sense of man-of-the-worldliness wouldn't let him leave. Not until he lost.

Then there was the middle-aged drinker who appeared drunker than he was. When the dice came his way, he turned to a woman he didn't know and with great flourish invited her to shoot for him.

This, I guess, was supposed to indicate he didn't care what happened to his money. Anyway, the sight of a fresh woman rolling with somebody else's dough seemed to give the other players new hope. Many bet on her.

She won at first, and then lost. And as she lost, the drinker became less drunk, less flamboyant, less cavalier.

Then there was the timid, guilt-ridden amateur. When he won, he looked apologetic, as if he were stealing the money. When he won, he looked apprehensive, as though three Chicago gunmen were waiting outside for him. When he lost, he seemed to be looking over his shoulder, as though he were playing with his boss' money.

There was the tight-lipped, belligerent skeptic. Every time his turn came, he growled for fresh dice. I doubt he would know loaded dice from kippered herring. Anyway, fresh dice didn't seem to help, either.

Finally there was the student. For one entire night, he stood by without playing. Just made notes. This was the system player, bubbling with conspiracy. He played the next night. The advantage of a system, as I observed during considerable research, is that with a system it may take you longer to lose, but you lose.

Pockets: Girl's Best Friend According To Top Fashions

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Pockets are a girl's best friend, say two fashion designers whose ideas change the look of American women's clothes each season.

They are Adele Simpson and Mollie Parnis, both of whom previewed their spring collections on the opening day of New York's current week of showing for the visiting fashion press.

A woman needs pockets for change, cigarettes, handkerchiefs, glasses, lipstick and shopping lists. But up to now most high-style fashions have ignored this basic need.

Mrs. Simpson and Miss Parnis, however, are correcting the situation this spring. Both show pockets of all sizes, shapes and descriptions on their new spring fashions. As the diminutive Mrs. Simpson remarks:

"This is an age of pockets. In order to look well, women must feel comfortable and easy in their clothes. They like to stand with hands in pockets, they like to have pockets in which to carry small belongings that get lost in the bottom of a handbag. They want and need functional clothes for ease of living—skirts with room for walking or for getting in and out of taxicabs, suits that turn into cocktail or restaurant dresses with the removal of the jacket—and enough pockets to hold their minor accessories."

Miss Parnis, favorite designer of Mrs. Eisenhower, shows envelope pockets on smooth, wearable, understated shirtwaist dresses for spring, and recommends the shirtwaist outfit for every hour of the day. She explains:

"Women don't want to look overdressed or regimented. They want clothes that make them feel good, and that don't have a lot of gadgets and trimmings that need constant adjustment. They want to look smooth, well-put-together and contemporary, but never faddish. They adapt today's fashions to their own tastes and activities, individualize them with their own accessories. And they like pockets, because pockets add to the ease of living."

Mrs. Simpson stresses the long-torso look in both suits and dresses for spring, and is careful to explain the type of foundation garment that should be worn with them—an all-in-one combination that smooths and lengthens the midriff, lifts and rounds the bust, gives the silhouette that long, unbroken line so important to the new styles.

World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press
News Analyst

WASHINGTON, (AP) — President Eisenhower, discussing Wolf Ladejinsky's case at his news conference, said this was a situation in which honest men came up with different answers.

The difference in their answers was profound. Because it was, the Democrats had new ammunition for their attacks on the whole operation of the administration's program to get security risks out of government jobs.

The Ladejinsky case broke while many Democrats were still boiling over Vice President Nixon's attacks on them in the 1954 election campaign, particularly for his statements on the number of Communists and other security risks being fired by this administration.

Under the security program a government worker can be let out as a security risk for a number of reasons in accordance with standards which, by their broadness, can leave room for the kind of difference of opinion that Eisenhower mentioned.

The government can bounce a man as a security risk if he's a Communist, if he has been found subversive, if there's information in his files which can be interpreted as subversive, if he's a drunk, homosexual, or a blabbermouth, or for other reasons.

And who does the interpreting? Officials in the agency where the man works have last say in the matter.

Ladejinsky, born in Russia but now a citizen, was twice found all right by the State Department, which employed him in a job in Japan. Agriculture Department officials, when he was transferred there, found him a risk.

Then Harold E. Stassen hired Ladejinsky to work for his Foreign Operations Administration. So two government agencies didn't consider the man a security risk; one did.

From time to time since the administration established the security program in the spring of 1953, it has released figures showing the number of people separated from the government and classed as security risks.

During last fall's campaign Nixon said: 'We're kicking Communists and fellow travelers and security risks out of the government, not by the hundreds but by the thousands."

It was this statement and others similar to itt hat the Democrats have complained about. No figures have been released to show how many of these persons classed a security risks were holdovers from the Truman administration, now many were first hired by the Eisenhower administration, or how many Communists were found.

Yesterday Eisenhower, who said Nixon had never condemned the Democratic party as a whole, and Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee, went to Nixon's defense under new and bitter Democratic attacks.

If Nixon and the Ladejinsky case weren't enough to keep the Democrats steamed up about the security program, the administration gave them a fresh talking point when it released its lagest figures Jan. 3. The Democrats, now running Congress, have been talking of investigating the whole program.

That report said, since the program started in mid-1953, 8,008 security risks have been fired or resigned from government jobs. It listed 2,096 of those under the head of subversion with this explanation:

"Number whose files contained information indicating in varying degrees, subversive activities, subversive associations, or membership in subversive organizations."

The Washington Post and Times-Herald, friendly to the Eisenhower administration took a look at the figures and said editorially: "The great virtue . . . of 8,008 is that anyone can read it sitting upright or standing on his head without changing the figure."

The Post raised questions which Oemocrats in one way or another have asked: How many of these "security risks" resigned without ever knowing they were accused of anything; how many had information in their files about subversion that was real or imaginary or provided by people who were malicious or irresponsible?

At his news conference yesterday Eisenhower said he doesn't consider the security program perfect, that efforts are being made all the time to improve it.

IN MARCH, Miss Peggy Keenan, shown sitting on plane and in doorway, will become the first woman in history to set foot at the North Pole. She will have charge of the film production unit of an expedition whose aim is to perfect an instrument by which planes can gauge from the air the thickness of Arctic ice and thus its suitability for landings. The plane she sits on is the Burnelli Loadmaster, a craft with an extra wide, wing-like fuselage which enables it to take off and land in a 1,500-foot stretch. Shown with her in plane's door are Dr. Paul Seydell (left) and John F. Stanwell-Fletcher, who will command the expedition. (International)

Cincy City Tax Slated For Test

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court has agreed to rule on the validity of Cincinnati's city income tax.

Thomas H. Clark, Cincinnati attorney, charged the tax imposed between last April 1 and Oct. 31 was discriminatory. Acting for himself and others similarly situated, Clark asked an injunction against the 1 per cent levy on wages earned in the city and on net profits of professions and business.

Hamilton County common pleas court granted the injunction but an appellate court dissolved it and dismissed the action Clark then appealed to the high court.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Tells Troubles

NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Patricia Wallace Vanderbilt says the dinner she and her daughter ate on Thanksgiving Day in 1953 came from $5 given them by a kindly New York city policeman.

Testifying yesterday in her suit for separation from Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., she said she had exhausted her money and had applied for city relief that year.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, her husband's fifth wife, is suing on grounds of cruelty, abandonment and nonsupport and asks $1,500 a week alimony. Vanderbilt, who married her in 1948, says he got a Mexican divorce in 1953 and she is no longer his wife.

Weekly Food Review

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The emphasis will be on pork ts in the nation's food stores this end.

Prices are lower because of avy marketing of hogs. Many ores will be offering specials on rk loins, pork chops, fresh hams d smoked picnics. In some cases, n prices will be trimmed six nts a pound below a week ago.

"Housewives looking for good od buys will want to plan on fre- ent servings of various pork cuts January meals," comments the S. Department of Agriculture. Pork roasts and chops, ham, ba- n, sausage and spareribs point e way to menu variety at reason- le prices.

"Treat the family to pork loin ast for dinner this week," the SDA adds. "If a roast is too rge for your family, have the tcher cut off some chops. That y you will get pork chops at a wer price than buying them ol. Use the chops first and store e roast to use afterward."

Leg of lamb will be another fa- rite weekend special, and some ores will drop prices on lamb ops.

Beef prices continue strong in holesale markets, but you may find lower prices in your market on chuck roast or round roast.

Frying chickens are edging high- er, with some markets boosting prices by from two to six cents a pound. There will be scattered specials on stewing and roasting chickens.

Eggs will be down a couple of cents a dozen in some areas and up in others.

On the list of the best buys in vegetables are potatoes and onions, old crop cabbage, radishes and nearby root crops—beets, carrots, parsnips and white turnips. Rated as good buys by produce specialists are pascal celery, peppers, new crop cabbage, eggplant, spinach, dry type sweet potatoes and cauliflower.

Golden heart celery is described as moderately priced. Lettuce is considerably higher and the quality is not too good.

Tangerines are considered the outstanding buy in fruits. Also recommended: Oranges, grapefruit, apples, limes and emperor grapes.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Caryl hessman, convicted in 1948 of kid- ping and attempted rape in Los ngeles lovers' lanes, has been anted his fifth reprieve from ath in San Quentin's gas cham- r.

Judge William Denman of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals sterday granted Chessman a ay of execution, ruling there was probable cause for appeal."

The 33-year-old author of "Cell 55, Death Row" has engaged in years of legal maneuvering om San Quentin. His case has en before the U.S. Supreme urt five times and has run the mut of lower courts.

The new stay means Chessman ll be given a hearing before the Circuit Court, probably in about o months. The court will then hold or reverse the Jan. 4 ruling Federal Dist. Judge Louis E. oodman, who dismissed Chess- an's petition for a writ of habeas rpus. Goodman called the peti- n a repetitious abuse of the writ habeas corpus.

If Goodman's ruling is reversed, hessman will be given a hearing the U.S. District Court of Ap- als.

If Goodman's ruling is upheld, hessman can still make another fort before U.S. Supreme Court. he Supreme Court said Chessman uld file a new application for a rit of habeas corpus in Federal District Court after it denied a review of his case last October.

The Supreme Court has rejected five applications for a writ of review. Chessman also has been turned down by the State Supreme Court on one appeal and three applications for a writ of habeas corpus. The U.S. District Court has rejected five applications for a writ of habeas corpus. And he lost a previous appeal in the same court where yesterday's stay was granted.

Yet his intensive legal action has resulted in five stays of execution since he entered San Quentin July 3, 1948.

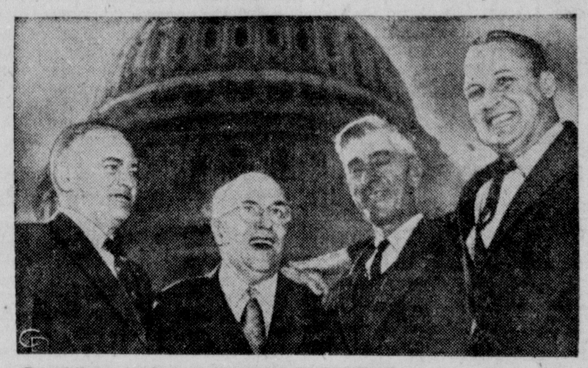

The "probable cause of appeal" named in yesterday's stay concerns the transcript made of Chessman's court trial for appeal purposes. The clerk who took the trial notes in shorthand died before he could finish transcribing them, and this job was completed by a substitute who said he could not make out all of his predecessor's notes.

Judge Denman, in granting the stay, noted Chessman's contention that he was not permitted to attend script for his appeal was so litigated" and was not represented by counsel.

If this is true, the judge said, it presents "a justifiable question whether the due process provisions of the 14th Amendment have been violated."

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Police Sgt. Wilhelm Neuhaus set out to catch two burglars yesterday but ended up instead with a police captain, a lieutenant and 40 prisoners.

Neuhaus received a call that two men were breaking into the basement of a candy store. He rushed to the scene, found the cellar door open, heard noise and barged in.

He helped capture 40 men accused of illegal card and dice games in the cellar. The two prowlers reported to Neuhaus were the captain and lieutenant about to surprise the gamblers.

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Robert D. Mahoney, 33, has taken his seat in the Michigan Legislature. So has his dog Happy. . .

Mahoney, though blind since he was 15, said after yesterday's opening session that he thinks he can keep pace with his colleagues in the House.

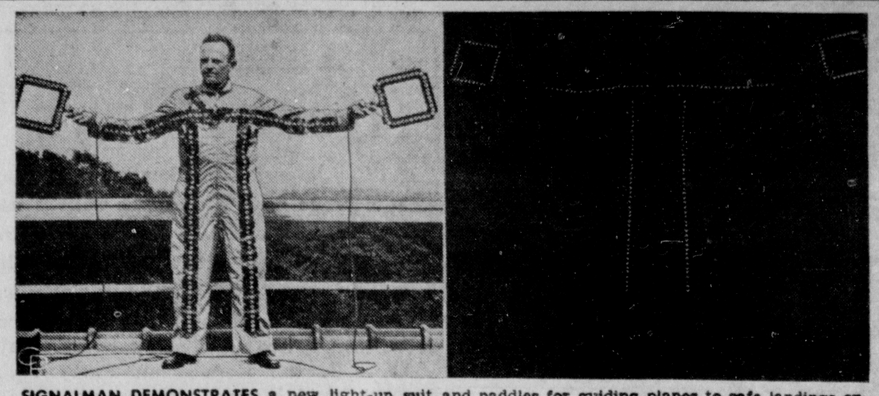

For taking notes, he uses a slate and stylus to print in Braille. Other representatives have offered to read to him much of the voluminous legislation he will have to study.

"So you see," said Mahoney, a Detroit Democrat, "it seems like a major problem, but actually it's a pretty minor one.'

Forestdale Folks Protest Gas Deal

COLUMBUS (AP)—Seventy - five residents of Forestdale, Lawrence County, have protested against the construction cost of a gas line proposed by the United Fuel Gas Co.

The company said a low pressure line which feeds the Coal Grove area was inadequate for Forestdale residents. They proposed construction of a 12,748-foot medium pressure pipe line to serve the Forestdale area with construction costs for each customer to run about $130. But Forestdale residents said 5,800 feet of the proposed line would go through Coal Grove and they objected to paying the costs for that section of the line.

PAYING FOR REARMAMENT

NOW THAT THE rearming of Germany is a possibility it is interesting to note what part the U. S. will play in an arrangement which promises to make Western Europe more secure against possible Russian aggression.

Final important factors are yet to be determined, but the administration is moving on the theory that final accord will be reached.

Final decisions are expected to be made by April, and the German army may begin to form by May. Contracts for arms to be supplied by the United States are being negotiated. These will consist mainly of tanks, fighter aircraft and some artillery. European factories will supply other units, but these will be paid for by Washington.

Already military supplies are being transferred to warehouses in France, England and Germany, to be available the minute the agreement becomes a certainty.

The burden of world peace rests heavier and heavier upon the United States. Whatever efforts are made in that direction, Washington is expected to pay the bill. To reconvert Germany into a military power will cost a pretty penny. But Washington diplomatic minds see this as the only answer to world problems.

It could turn out to be money well spent at that, but that is not to contend that it could not be as well spent by some other country.

EGGS FOR BREAKFAST

CONCERNED OVER rising production and falling prices the Agricultural Department will try to do something to stabilize the egg market. The government wants the populace to go on an egg-eating project through January. Hens are flooding the market at a season of the year when production is usually low.

An extra egg for breakfast and the use of more in cooking will help to lessen the surplus, the government advises. Besides eggs are recommended as an excellent contribution to nutritive needs.

Producers have been imploring the government for price support, which has been refused. However, 72 million eggs will be taken off the market, to be dried under a new and improved process. However, the government is not going back in the egg business, and the problem has to be solved in some other way. Increased consumption will be helpful.

There was a time in earlier days when eggs played an important part in household economy. Exchanged at the local grocery store they provided many of the food staples, especially sugar and coffee. Mother accumulated some cash, which came in handy for family needs. Now eggs are big business, which seems to have got out of hand.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

It is perhaps a sound adage to 'Let sleeping dogs lie." The Peress Case is one which does not seriously involve the now celebrated dentist, but it has affected the careers of many others, and has since last March stirred the country by the quarrel between the Army and Senator McCarthy. It has split the Republican Party right down the middle, and has been an embarrassment to everybody who came close to it.

The case of Peress itself is hardly important. There must be many instances in the Army, which processes millions of young men and women, as the phrase goes, in which papers are inadequately or improperly made out and are negligently handled. It was therefore surprising to those who were close to the case that the Army should have made such a fuss over it.

The answer to all of Senator McCarthy's questions could have been—"Sorry! Here is another paper snafu. In the handling of millions of papers, there will be a snafu here and there. We shall make whatever corrections are needed and we shall explore our methods to insure that there are fewer errors.'

But no such answer was given. As I have been mentioned, too often, in the original Stevens-McCarthy testimony, and as I was present during a conference between them, and had some telephone calls, by his initation, with John Adams, the Army report issued last Friday comes as no surprise to me. I knew that John Adams had pushed the 'Honorable Discharge" of Major Peress as a solution of the problem. He thought that if Peress was got out of the Army, McCarthy ought to be satisfied.

Unfortunately, the issue was never Peress, just as in the Fuchs-Rosenberg Cases, the issue should never have been Dr. Klaus Fuchs or Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. The issue was, with regard to Peress and should have been in the Fuchs-Rosenberg Cases—who makes it easy for spies, subversives and such to infiltrate the agencies of government?

This is very unpleasant business and everyone who engages in it burns his fingers, if not more than that. Definitely it looks like persecution. Those who do these jobs look like relentless, fanatical persecutors. Nobody has yet found a method of unearthing spies and subversives pleasantly.

The Subcommittee on Rules of the Senate, headed by Senator William Jenner, has held long hearings on the subject of such investigations and has come up with a report on procedural rules which look very good in the report and ought to be adopted, if for no reason than experimentally to see whether they will achieve the end desired, which is the accumulation of information.

As long as Executive Departments can withhold valuable and valid information from Congressional committees, no rules will help the committees. For instance, had the Army's report on Peress been sent to the Congress last March, when as much was known about the case as is known today, there would have been no disgraceful fracas between the Army and a committee of Congress. Now, it has to start all over again to straighten out the record.

Tension Often Causes Terrible Headaches

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

GOT a headache?

Well, if you don't have one this very minute, chances are you had one yesterady, or will have one in the very near future. Most people have a lot of needless headaches.

I think I can give you some suggestions on how to avoid some of them, and how to bring fairly quick relief when you do get one.

Simple Variety

Now I am speaking about the simple headaches, and not those caused by some disease such as brain tumor or abscess, or inflammation of the scalp nerves.

A great many of you, I'm sure, can blame your headaches on tension. If you're nervous and tense, or upset emotionally, you can expect frequent attacks. Busy executives are often victims of tension headaches.

Pressure in Head

You actually have a feeling of tension in your head during such an attack. You feel pressure within your head and a tight band seems to be binding it. Frequently, your muscles will also feel tense during a headache like this.

Migraine headaches, caused by enlargement of the head's blood vessels, may also often be laid directly to worry and nervousness.

Take It Easy

You've just got to relax more. Take it easy; don't get upset over little things. Try not to be quite so perfect in everything you do.

Look at the bright side of things. Remember, whatever worries you may have today won't seem so bad tomorrow.

There are a few other things you've got to do, too. Avoid eyestrain. Have your eyes examined at least every two years.

Get Enough Sleep

Keep regular hours and get plenty of sleep.

Maintain a normal bowel movement. I'll have more to say about this in another column soon.

Migraine might also be caused by some sensitivity to food or to some substance in your environment. So keep a written record of your headaches, and check to see whether they are related to any specific food or activities. Sometimes, however, migraine is inherited from your parents.

What can you do to relieve a headache when you do get one? I'll tell you tomorrow.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

L. W.: My 19-year-old niece has albumin in her urine. Could you prescribe a diet she can follow to get rid of it?

Answer: It is advisable for your niece to have a careful study made by a physician to determine just why the albumin is present.

It might be due to some inflammation of the kidneys or bladder. It might also be due to a disorder known as nephrosis. Sometimes albumin may be present without any organic disturbance.

Once the cause is found proper treatment can be prescribed.

HAWK WATCH

By BRANDON BIRD

Copyright, 1954, by George Evans and Kay Evans. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

SYNOPSIS

While photographing a hawk migration in the mountains of West Virginia, ace professional lensman, Charles Gratton, learns that some one is dying an eagle, a grave infraction of local game laws. He explores the ledge where he has seen an eagle in flight and comes upon a decadent mansion now occupied by one Anson Metcalf and his sister, Dana, both expert falconers. As Gratton approaches the residence, he is greeted by lovely young Dana who manages to keep at bay a vicious dog guarding the place. She ignores the intruder's reference to eagles, diverting him by exhibiting her pet hawk, "Butcherboy," a wicked looking fellow who meekly obeys the girl's commands. Dana speaks of her father who long ago had left this house, and of her hope of one day leaving here to join him. Returning to the village, Gratton finds a demolished car which had been towed in from a canyon. Search had failed to produce a driver or a body.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

THE old barber finished his sandwich and moved to the marble wash basins, where he very carefully scrubbed and dried his hands. Then he shuffled toward the far chair, sucking his lunch out of his teeth with little sounds like a chirping sparrow.

I pointed to the mugs. "Do you mind telling me a little about these?"

He hobbled over, his chocolate skin wrinkled into a smile. He had put on steel-framed spectacles which made him look like a sleepy Mahatma Gandhi.

"You seem to have a lot of customers," I said.

He shook his head slowly. "Most of those gen'men gone on, suh." He said it very sadly. "Only five still livin'."

"These look in use."

"I dust them every morning."

"Were they all local men?" I asked.

He took his glasses off and polished them, blinking.

"Lots of them was summer folks, come down from the cities to take the waters. Back when Fairfax Springs was really something. Come back each year, each gen'man come in here for his own barber."

"You had other barbers?"

"We had all six chairs workin', suh." He grew an inch in height. "When Fairfax Springs was something."

"I imagine you remember most of your customers well," I said casually.

"Deed I do." He took down a pale number done in forget-me-nots and gold initials. "Some of the ladies used to hand-paint their husbands' shaving mugs in those days. This is Mr. Morgan with the posies. He only wanted once over." He set it oack and lifted a pink and gold one, frowning at a speck on the interior. "Mr. Wakefield, that. Cold water with his lather."

"Why is this one blank?" I asked, touching an undecorated mug.

"That," he snorted. "That's Mr. Cadwaller from New York." He turned the mug around but left it sitting in its niche. It was the first time I'd seen a nude with a Police Gazette silhouette in china painting.

"That's quite artistic," I grinned. "Did his wife paint that?"

"He was a bachelor, suh." He turned the mug around with the lady to the wall. "All three of those gen'men long dead."

"Did you ever have a client by the name of Metcalf?" I asked.

He picked a mug from the lower row, black with an intricate Old English M in gold.

"There," he said proudly, "is Mr. Anson Metcalf. One hot towel and twice over. A fine gen'man."

"You know the family?"

"I ought to, suh. Done their barberin' almost since I started workin' here in nineteen hundred." He put the mug carefully in its place.

"While you work on me," I followed him to the furthest chair, "tell me a little about Mr. Metcalf. Any man with a shaving mug like that must be interesting."

I sat down on the cracked black leather seat and said to give me a trim, fairly close. I noticed the bottles at the other chairs were empty.

While he adjusted a starched cloth about my neck with very clean-smelling hands, he started on a long train of reminiscence, talking around a couple of straight pins pinched in his lips. He finally used the pins to fasten the neck cloth and I could understand him better.

"Mr. Metcalf started coming here after his own hotel burned down. Always come to me. Say no one but Jeff could shave him right. Stop in every time he come to town." He'd begun to nibble at the back of my neck with a pair of hand clippers.

"You say he owned a hotel?"

"The Metcalf House, suh. Over next to the mineral springs. Burned down 'long about nineteen two."

"You're talking about a different Anson Metcalf," I said. "I'm thinking of a young man."

"That's young Mr. Anson. He's the grandson." In the mirror I could see him shaking his head. "That's different, suh. Yessuh, mighty different."

He laid down his clippers and started with his comb and scissors.

I let him get under way and then I asked, "You know him?"

"Yessuh, he come in 'bout every two months with his hair long and straggledy. Young Mr. Anson don't take the care in his looks like his granddaddy did."

He stopped and looked at me over my shoulder in the mirror while his scissors went on munching on thin air.

"Ever notice, suh, folkses' breedin' don't run true to form like horses and bird dogs. People has done too much helter skelterin'." He went back to his slow work on my hair.

"You say young Anson has no pride?"

He stopped, motionless. "Nosuh. I didn't say nuthin' like that. He got all kinds of pride. I say he don't take no care of his looks."

"What about the father? Old Anson's son?"

"He used to come in here." We weren't making much progress because every time he talked he stopped cutting. "Mr. John Metcalf never seemed to be the man his daddy was. He was a gen'man. I don't mean he wasn't, but beside old Mr. Anson drivin' up and tyin' his fast horses out in front, Mr. John never seemed to have much subject to him. You know the kind, suh."

He scratched his gray mossy head and chuckled.

"For all of that, he married one mighty handsome lady. Yessuh, Miss Belle, she was a beauty."

"Really?"

"Mr. John, he twice as old as Miss Belle, they say. No one never thought he had it in him."

After a while I said, "You don't see young Anson very often?"

"Nosuh. He live 'way back up on the mountain and no one see him much. Always been peculiar. Makes me use his granddaddy's mug and brush on him. Want everything just like the old days." His reflection watched me from the mirror. "They say nothing's been changed up at the old home. No electric, nothing different from the way his granddaddy had it." He shook his head. "And if that's how young Mr. Anson want it, I can tell you that's how it gwine to be. He that kind of young gen'man. Have his way or bust."

"What does this young Mr. Anson look like?" I asked.

He stopped again to do his thinking. "It strange about young Mr. Anson," he said. "He come in here and he go out. Then a long time pass and he come and go again and after he gone it's hard to say what he look like. Ain't no one look like young Mr. Anson, I don't guess."

"Well," I made an effort, "is he big?"

"Cain't say he look big but he seem big. Yessuh, guess it's that he talk and feel big."

"Is he light complexioned?"

"His hair dark. Real black and long. But his skin, it white."

"His face—what's it like?"

"Best I can remember it always looks unhappy. Like somethin' hurt inside. Kind of hard for me to remember much how my gen'men look. They all look like their shaving mugs settin' back there in rows. That's now I think young Mr. Anson look. Like that shaving mug—gold and black."

I thought about that for a long time while he droned on.

It must have got me for I came to when he laid a brushful of warm lather at my temples.

He chuckled as he stropped his razor with a slow, slapping sound. "Yessuh, somethin' 'bout the way I works puts folks to sleep."

He tilted my head and laid the straight sharp razor on my cheekbone, feeling for the place to start.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

By Ray Tucker

WASHINGTON — The current proposal that a super-commission of eminent nonpartisans investigate and reorganize the federal security system has been rejected secretly by President Eisenhower and his principal political advisers on several occasions. They have turned it down because of their belief that it was a Communist attempt to destroy any safeguard against fellow-travelers of the Alger Hiss and Harry White variety.

The President is known to have strong feelings on this subject, along with Attorney-General Herbert Brownell Jr., Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield and Sherman Adams, White House chief of staff.

Although the system's operation may cause individual hardship and sometimes injustice, they believe that any doubt remaining after painstaking and conscientious scrutiny of a suspect should be resolved in favor of the government and the people of the United States.

LADEJINSKY — Nor does Ike see any consistency between Secretary Ezra Taft Benson's and Foreign Operations Administrator Harold E. Stassen's conflicting judgments on Wolfe Ladejinsky, Asian land elpert. As both note, two men may draw different conclusions from the same set of facts.

Even the Supreme Court frequently divides five-to-four on far more important issues. In fact, Justice Felix Frankfurter has reversed himself without blinking a judicial eye. No system can erase human imperfections.

When the idea of revision of the FSS was first advanced several years ago by allegedly pinkish professors under congressional investigation, it was regarded as an attack on Sen. Joe McCarthy and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Eisenhower had not then broken with the Wisconsin senator.

Ike turned the problem over to a committee consisting of Milton Eisenhower, Nelson Rockefeller, and Arthur S. Fleming, head of defense mobilization. They recommended retention of the present system, but amendments giving more defense and appeal rights to the accused were adopted.

CRITICS—The revision, however, did not placate or satisfy the critics, and the attack was renewed before and during the 1954 off-year campaign. Friends of Owen Lattimore, including many former New Deal officials, headed the movement Stevenson denounced the procedure, too.

Finally, after a high-level conference, Eisenhower himself killed the idea. He acted on the advice of Brownell, Summerfield and Adams. They argued that the sponsors of an overhaul were anti-Administration troublemakers. They also pointed out that endorsement of the plan for an investigation and revision would amount to indictment of the Eisenhower-Brownell methods.

As periodical announcement of the number of "risk" discharges and resignations by the Civil Service Commission reveals, Ike is extremely proud of his achievements in this field. Getting rid of infiltrators was a major 1952 pledge, and McCarthy prodding has made it a political necessity.

EXAMINATION — The renewed attack results from Administrative handling of the Ladejinsky, Oppenheimer, Service and Davies cases. It has been shifted from McCarthy and J. Edgar Hoover to Ike himself. Democrats will make it an issue on Capitol Hill, for all the articulate accused, from Lattimore to Ladejinsky, were appointed or promoted by Roosevelt and Truman.

The Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic has allocated $100,000 for an examination of the federal security system, and it will be conducted by the New York Bar Association. Oddly, the Fund for the Republic was recently headed by Sen. Clifford P. Case of New Jersey, a bitter McCarthy foe. But the Ford interests, both philanthropic and industrial, are extremely pro-Ike.

The latest batch of critics sponsored inquiry might be too favorable to the President. It may be significant that they include a St. Louis newspaper notoriously anti-Ike, and a weekly news magazine columnist who was a close friend and biographer of Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is expected that Ike will stand pat, and await the results of the Ford study.

Try, Stop Me

For one of their musical plays, P. G. Wodehouse and Guy Bolton wanted Billy B. Van in the comedy lead, but their frugal producer, Colonel Henry Savage, demurred. "Van gets three hundred a week. The part's worth only half that to me. But if you boys are so set on having Van, I tell you what I'll do. Pay half his salary for the first three months and I'll hire him."

Van was a big hit in the role. For three months, Wodehouse and Bolton faithfully poined up a hundred and fifty simoleons of their own to pay half his salary.

At the end of the third month Colonel Savage fired him.

GOVERNMENT ABANDONS SMALLEST POST OFFICE

Mrs. Catherine Probst stands in doorway of what had been nation's smallest post office before it was closed.

By VIC RUSSELL
Central Press Correspondent

VAN BUREN, Mo.—One by one the many attractions of the old Ozarks are disappearing from the hillsides. The latest to bow out of the public picture is what has been heralded for 40 years as the smallest post office in the United States.

There are many, many small post offices in the back of general stores throughout the United States, but the Handy, Mo., post office was in a building all by itself.

The outside of the building was only 8 by 10 feet and made from slab boards (the outside of a saw log with bark attached).

THE LITTLE P. O. would have been crowded with three people in it, so most mail delivery was made by Postmistress Catherine Probst handing it out from the front door.

It didn't matter what time of the day or night people called for their mail. Mrs. Probst unfastened the large safety pin which held the postoffice key securely on her dress, unlocked the building which stood in the front yard of her farm home and gave the caller his mail.

The Probst farm is rolling land and a grove of virgin pine, all that is left of the magnificent pine forest which once covered that locality, shelters the house and the post office building.

A RECENT ORDER from the Post Office department has now closed this quaint post office because of lack of revenue. It had served only a dozen or so families scattered around the hills. Mail was brought into the office by a star route delivery from a town 20 miles away on the railroad.

The handy post office was built in 1913, when workers, laboring a sawmill which had cut off the pine timber was moving away, decided to stay on and farm the fertile valleys. They were virtually cut off from civilization, with the removal of the timber trains.

Noah Haney, father of Mrs. Probst, rode horseback over the hills to get names on a petition which brought mail into the community and made him postmaster. The name "Handy" was adopted when one farmer remarked how handy it was going to be to have mail brought right to them.

Mrs. Probst took over the job of postmistress when her father could no longer keep it and those two have been the only two to have charge of the postoffice for 42 years.

THE POST OFFICE was used a great deal by fishermen and hunters who came into the hills, chiefly to get a cancellation from the smallest post office in the United States. It became one of the favored stopping places for out-county and out-state visitors on their annual trips into that section of the Ozarks.

For years, Mrs. Probst's husband shipped Christmas trees to many midwestern cities and as far away as the west coast to boost the revenue of the small post office.

Shipments, however, have lessened in the past few years and revenue has fallen off so that the government thought it advisable to close it.

Sidewalk 'Burns' In California

The startled pipe smoker fled like a turpentied cat and police never did find him to learn if he'd been burned. Firemen found that a leaking gas main beneath the pavement caused the explosion and the trail of fire which ran along the cracks.

Full-Scale Hearings Slated By Ohio Assembly Leaders

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Senate, under the spur of its Republican leadership, swings into full-scale hearings on several primary bills next week, just two weeks after convening of the Legislature.

Both House and Senate started a long weekend recess at noon yesterday. But in the interval until they reconvene at 8 p. m. Monday law-makers will be busy getting more proposed bills into shape.

Members are working against a Feb. 14 deadline for introduction of bills. House members weren't surprised at the deadline, for they customarily observe one. But the decision of Senate Majority Leader C. Stanley Mechem that the Senate would observe a deadline for the first time since 1939 hit his colleagues an unexpected blow.

Representatives and senators combined yesterday to introduce another 22 proposed laws. That brings the total offered in the first two weeks of the session to 131.

Mechem, weary of the drawn-out sessions of recent years, got out the whip early and insisted his committee chairmen schedule quick hearings on bills already introduced. The result was that six of the 20 committees scheduled hearings next week on 12 of the 44 bills now before the Senate.

One of the top-interest bills now before the Senate is scheduled for its first hearing Monday night after the Senate session.

It is a measure by Sen. David McK. Ferguson (R-Guernsey) to strip the Ohio Turnpike Commission of the authority to issue bonds for further turnpike construction without approval of the Legislature. The change in the law would give the Legislature the whip hand in deciding whether new turnpikes are to be built and what routes they would take.

The Senate Highways and Public Utilities Committee will hear friends and foes of the bill. Ferguson is the committee's chairman.

Two measures important to the state's judges are down for hearing Wednesday before the Senate finance and judiciary committees.

Before the finance group is a bill to raise the salaries of judges ranging from $20,000 for the Supreme Court's chief justice and $19,000 for associate justices to a minimum of $7,000 for judges of common pleas courts. Minimum salary for the latter now is $4,000.

The Senate Judiciary Committee will start hearings Wednesday on a proposal to permit increases in salary, but no decreases, for public officials during their terms of office.

The change, because it is an amendment to the State Constitution, requires a three-fifths favorable vote of both houses of the Legislature and a majority approval of the voters.

It has the support of the Ohio Bar Assn. and of Gov. Frank J Lausche, who terms the present bar against salary increases "manifestly unfair."

Heifer Project Seeks New Aid

NEW WINDSOR, Md. (AP) — The board of Heifer Project, Inc., has announced that this year other countries of plenty, as well as the United States, will be asked to provide livestock for distribution in war-ravaged and agriculturally undeveloped areas.

The group hopes to obtain and distribute 1,200 head of cattle, 500 goats, 400 pigs, 1,000 chicks and 400 packages of honey bees to needy areas this year. Much of the work will be done in Austria and Germany, to help set up refugees from Communist countries on farm of their own.

Chiang's Bombers Strike Reds Again

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — Nationalist China's air force headquarters said its four-engine bombers had "excellent results" in a three-wave attack yesterday on Communist-held Toumen and Tienao islands.

The Nationalists said all planes returned to Formosa, 200 miles south of the islands, despite anti-aircraft fire and Red air force fighters.

This was the third straight day's strike against Tienao, which is almost next door to the Nationalists' Tachens, which were attacked by 100 Red planes Monday.

NEW MAPS APPEAR AS REAL AS ACTUAL AERIAL PHOTOS

By JOHN F. SEMBOWER
Central Press Correspondent

DENVER, Colo.—You just look at the newest type aerial maps as if you were in an airplane thousands of feet above the earth, instead of learning to "read" them.

These new type maps which are the rage with flyers of all kinds of planes and are beginning to make their appearance in geography classrooms in the nation's schools, are the invention of a former airline pilot who spotted the need for such a revolutionary technique of cartography while he flew the Omaha-San Francisco route.

Elrey B. Jeppesen

Elrey Jeppesen bought a 10-cent store notebook and began making detailed notes of his observations of the terrain down below him. Word got around among the commercial pilots about his notebook, and other pilots wanted copies of those notes. Some of them made payment by exchanging the notes and sketches they made of their routes.

That was the start of the Jeppesen Airway Manual which now is standard equipment for most pilots. It is a loose leaf notebook that is packed with these graphic contour maps of every section of the United States. Special attention is given to the approaches to airports.

However, the by-product of this venture, the large-scale production of maps, has become a huge operation. More than seven million of the new maps that are so realistic they seem to jump off the paper have been produced in about four years.

LOOKING at such a map, Junior doesn't need to be told why the pioneers went through Cumberland gap on their way to the west; he can see for himself that at that point there is a low-level path through the mountains.

The Hudson valley actually looks like the place where people would move in and populate. The trails to the far west snake along as logically as can be. The eastern mountains are relatively low and green, showing evidence of the forests that cover them; the western peaks are rocky gray and many are snow-covered.

The realistic effect is the result of a deliberate effort at getting a pictorial result. Art Director Hal Shelton of the Jeppesen organization often takes scores of aerial photos as guides for making maps. Many of these show the "field pattern" that airplane travelers see aloft, and cities are not dots on the maps but actually take on the shapes that flyers see.

TECHNICALLY, the Jeppesen technique is known among mapmakers as a Lambert Conformal projection. It has long been recognized as the best way to make official aeronautical charts.

More conventional maps use the "hachure" method of indicating levels by short pen strokes which indicate the margins of mountains and ridges, or the "contour" method that uses wavy lines to show different levels. The latter often requires expert reading.

Instead of using certain set colors to indicate altitudes, the new maps portray the ground as it actually looks from the air—buffs and reds predominate throughout the west; lush green appears in the middle west, south and east, and the mountains are pictured just as they are.

EVERY MAP is a detailed third-dimensional drawing, the uncanny raised effect being obtained by the use of shadings which do not appear to be shading at all.

Because they are so realistic, the Jeppesen maps are constantly being double checked by the users, who frequently write in to tell of differences they have noted.

The map makers recheck the terrain at the earliest opportunity, and usually are able to advise their correspondent where his own observation was a little off.

"However, whoever heard of anyone being able to use an ordinary map so realistically that he could feel qualified to suggest changes?" comments Jeppesen, who gets a kick out of every time that his map users feel impelled to get into the act of their preparation.

Mail-Carrying Feud Boiling To New High

It brings to sharp focus the deadly rivalry between the railroads, on the one hand, and the airlines and truckers on the other.

The feud came to a boil in October 1953 when the post office launched an "experiment" of flying first class 3-cent mail on the New York-Chicago and Washington - Chicago routes whenever airlines had space available for it. The experiment was broadened to include Florida points and local airlines covering 125 scattered communities. This deprived the rails of sizeable mail revenues.

The railroads got even madder when the experiment spread to include major Pacific Coast cities last November.

But Postmaster General Summerfield reported last month that in the initial stage of the West Coast "air life" ordinary letters bearing 3-cent stamps had been advanced in delivery by from 24 to 48 hours.

"To date the 3-cent mail by air experiment is improving mail service at slight savings in over-all cost to those formerly paid," said Summerfield.

The railroads protested that the savings were only apparent and ignored the "complete" mail service rendered by the rails. The airlines and their allies, the truckers, argued back. Thousands of words were exchanged.

The rails say that already the experiment has wiped out most of their lucrative haulage of first class mail on the New York-Chicago-Washington routes.

The industry complains that it has invested close to a billion dollars in mail handling facilities whereas the airlines and truckers have invested nothing and the taxpayers must provide these for them.

They protest further that they are required by law—under pain of severe penalties—to carry all mail offered them and to carry it on any and all trains the post office may direct.

In contrast, say the railroads, the airlines carry 3-cent mail only on a "space available" basis—when it is not crowded out by more profitable payloads of passengers or cargo. Thus, say the rails, the airlines "skim the cream" of the mail business, leaving the railroads the "crumbs."

Railroads have challenged the legality of carrying 3-cent mail by air and have launched court actions. But the experiment goes on.

Meanwhile, the railroads are losing more mail revenue, they say, because the post office has awarded contracts to motor carriers to carry mail on more than 550 routes.

The diversion of mail, they add, if carried to the limit, means that the railroads will suffer a potential loss of mail revenues amounting to 300 million dollars a year. This will threaten the jobs of many of the 50,000 rail employes who handle mail and compel cancellation of hundreds of passenger trains now operating near the break-event point, they say.

But the airlines and truckers call the rails' billion-dollar figure on mail facilities "unrealistic" and say the 300 million figure covers total mail revenues, not just first class which they assert was only 40 million dollars in 1953, or 2-5 of one per cent of all mail revenues.

They argue that, just as the railroads succeeded the canal boat and stage coach as mail carriers, give way, at least to some degree, before more modern means of transportation.

They quote Summerfield's statement to the Senate in 1953:

"We propose to utilize all available means of transportation, believing that all are important to our national economy."

Ohio 1954 Strike Record Shows Dip

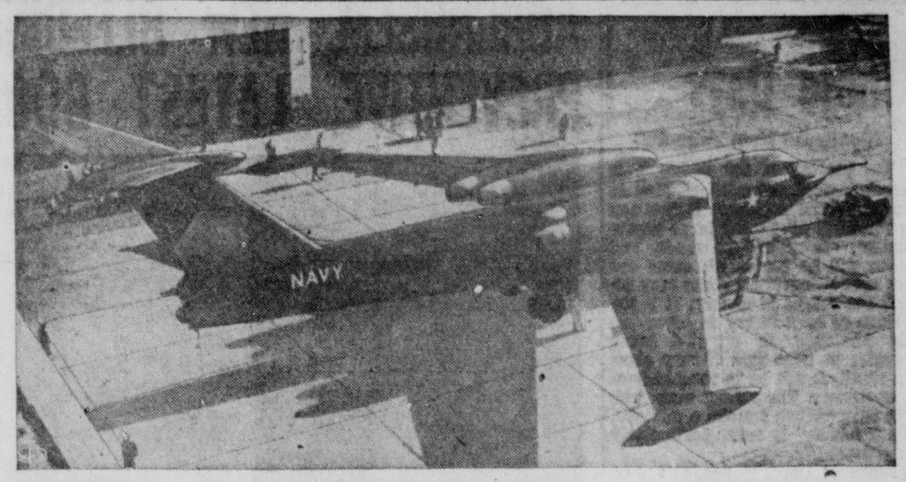

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Department of Industrial Relations says Ohio's strike record for 1954 was considerably better than the previous year and the post World War II average.

Director Margaret A. Mahoney said preliminary 1954 work stoppage figures showed 260 stoppages beginning during the year involving 140,000 workers, half the number in 953. But idleness dropped only about 20 per cent, indicating 1954 strikes averaged slightly longer than those in 1953.

Idle Pay Claims Show Increase

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation reports an estimated 21,886 claimants newly unemployed for the week ended Jan. 8 compared to 18,241 the previous week.

Claimants unemployed one week or more were estimated at 93,741 compared to 90,273 the previous week. These totals do not include those who have received their maximum payments and still may be unemployed.

Court To Hear Vet's Protest

The Ohio Supreme Court agreed to review appellate court dismissal of his suit to enjoin distribution of some $265,000 to eight chartered groups for the biennium ending next June 30.

Brunner Dickman contended as a taxpayer that the appropriations were unconstitutional. He said they amounted to use of public funds for private purposes. The propriated about a quarter of a million dollars to veterans groups.

When you want to Go
-You're gonna Go!

No ifs, ands or buts about it.

When you give the gun to a 1955 Buick with Dynaflow Drive,* you move.

In the instant you push down the pedal, you get the action you've called for—immediate getaway from a standing start, or immediate safety-surge out of a tight spot on the highway.

It's not magic, this thrilling and pulse-quickening response—though it feels like the closest thing to it.

It's a principle of the modern airplane, brought for the first time to an automotive transmission.

Twenty "variable pitch propellers" inside the Dynaflow unit itself can change their angle—like the propeller of the airliner can change its pitch from take-off position to cruising position.

And what this brings to you—at the wheel of a 1955 Buick—is the nearest thing to flight on wheels. Far better gas mileage in your normal driving and cruising. Spectacular new response when you want it for extra quick getaway or emergency acceleration.

But all this, mind you, with the absolute smoothness that is constant in Dynaflow Drive.

Surely, a demonstration of Variable Pitch Dynaflow is a Buick must this year. We'll be happy to do the honors—and show you, in the doing, what a whale of a buy you make here. Drop in this week, won't you?

Dynaflow Drive is standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on other Series.*

Mrs. Shopper Being Courted By Merchants

Businessmen Finding Smiles, Wide Variety Of Merchandise Needed

NEW YORK (AP)—Things are looking up these days for the missus who goes a - shopping Never has she been courted so assiduously by the merchants who depend on her trade.

The concentrated frenzy with which retailers are striving to find out what you, the consumer, really want is apt to be a leading topic of conversation wherever merchants gather. It was certainly very much in evidence this week at the annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Assn. here.

Merchants think finding the right answer will lead them to better sales and profits—at a time when some segments of retailing, notably the department store, have been pinched by growing competition and rising costs.

For you as Mr or Mrs. Average Shopper the new preoccupation with customers' needs should add up to pleasanter shopping all around. Here are some improvements you can look for:

Salesgirls who smile, help you with your packages, and call you by name.

A bigger assortment of attractive merchandise, where and when you want it, and at prices you want to pay.

A whirlwind store expansion program. Expenditures for chain store construction and modernization this year are expected to show a gain of 10 per cent over record 1954. This will mean more new stores in outlying shopping centers, and more face lifting of older stores in established Main Street locations. Top NRDGA officials say a really vigorous effort will be made in 1955 to revitalize the Main Street store. Figuring prominently in this planning are such costly improvements as air-conditioning, new display fixtures, new lighting, new interiors. new fronts, and facilities for off - street parking.

In a further move to keep their customers happy, dry good merchants are hanging out the help wanted sign for a type of employee they describe as "the old-time buyer." When she bought new merchandise, the old - time buyer always kept her customers' wants in mind. If it was a dress she was buying, she imagined how that dress would look when the customer tried it on. She knew exactly what kind of parties, socials and occasions the customer wanted the dress for, and exactly why the dress would be bought. Her contemporary counterpart, some retailers complain, just goes out and orders the merchandise, and then wonders why the customer doesn't buy it.

Meanwhile there's evidence that established retailers are taking a good hard second look at discount house competition. All during 1954, policy making officials of the NRDGA (it's the nation's biggest retail trade association) denounced the discount merchant as a "bootlegger" and discount merchandising as an "evil."

But at their convention this week they gave top oilling to a speaker who eloquently defended the discount operator. Assistant Secretary of Commerce James C. Worthy (formerly a top Sears, Roebuck & Co. executive) told the meeting that the discount house is here to stay.

"The pheonomenal growth of the discount house and discount selling should be the signal for a reappraisal of conventional merchandising policies," he said, "for it is unquestionably a response to the consumer's desire for a wider degree of latitude in which to exercise his free choice as how he wants to spend his money. And as one with deep convictions about the American system, I would not deny him this freedom."

Sokolsky's

The essence of the problem is psychological, not political. Men do not like to admit errors if they can cover them up. In any large organization, errors will be made and some will be corrected; some are not ever discovered; some may affect the course of history. It is the nature of man to try to cover up his mistakes, to avoid being caught, to hope that if they show up at all, it will be in the hands of a successor. The strong man who can say: "When I make a mistake, it's a beaut," is rare, particularly in official life.

Nevertheless, it needs to be known how the spies, subversives and perverts managed to get into our government operations and to stay there. Catching some little fellow down the line is an individual act that means little or nothing. What needs to be known is the pattern of operations that made it so easy for them to get in and stay in.

Maybe no individual is to blame; maybe it is a faulty system of government employment; maybe it is just the normal American attitude of live and let live. Whatever it is, Secretary Stevens of the Army has reopened the door to another series of investigations.

French-Italian Parleys Continue

ROME (AP) — French Premier Pierre Mendes-France kept up his whirlwind round of calls and conferences with Italian officials today in his campaign to win support for the West European arms pool he has proposed.

Both French and Italian participants in the talks said they were "keenly satisfied" with their progress, but French sources cautioned that "no major decisions can be expected right now."

Responsible sources said Premier Mario Scelba and his Cabinet approve in principle Mendes-France's proposal to form an international agency within the projected seven-nation Western European Union to control the countries' production of arms.

Use Of 'Ex-Convict' Term Questioned

CHICAGO (AP)—An Illinois legislator says he will seek a state law forbidding newspapers, radio and television stations to refer to anyone as an ex-convict if the person has been a law-abiding citizen for 10 years.

'Maybe we'll cut it down to five years," said Rep. Hector A. Brouillet (R-Chicago). "I don't believe it fair to dig up the long-ago past against a person.'

ADRENOSEM, NEW BLEEDING PREVENTIVE, LATEST BOON

By JERRY KLEIN
Written Especially for Central Press and This Newspaper.

AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY "cure" for nosebleed was to soak a linen rag in vinegar, burn it and then inhale the ashes. However, this wouldn't have helped the recent case of a 58-year-old woman who suffered terrible nose bleds every day for week after week.

Despite repeated transfusions, the woman was becoming weaker. She was so worried about a massive, final hemorrhage that she was "unable to blow her nose for fear."

Then the woman was given daily doses of a new discovery called adrenosem. She took the drug for four weeks—and didn't have even one nosebleed during all that time.

This patient was but one of 77 who recently were given test doses of the bleeding preventive by Dr. Daniel A. Sherber of New Rochelle, N. Y. Reporting on these tests in the American Journal of Surgery, Dr. Sherber said that the new drug "appears superior to any similar material that is now available."

Dr. Sherber reported that in some surgical cases, adrenosem halted bleeding in only 20 minutes! He also told of a 55-year-old man who had been suffering constant pulmonary bleeding for six weeks without relief. Within 24 hours after taking the new drug, "all evidence of bleeding stopped" and there was hardly any recurrence for two months.

THE POTENTIAL life-saving value of a drug which safely stops bleeding is made obvious by the fact that America has about 33 million medical cases a year in which loss of blood is a serious complication.

Doctors agree that "there has been an ever-present need throughout history for a systemic hemostat"—that is, a substance which would help keep our blood vessels from leaking.

The discoverers of adrenosem say that it stops bleeding without any of the usual disadvantages of such a drug: thickening the blood, disturbing heart action or raising blood pressure.

Although it was introduced less than one year ago, more than 1,200 hospitals in 45 states are using it and almost 200,000 patients have received doses.

The bleeding preventive is being administered both before and after surgery, and especially in tonsil, prostate and bladder cases where bleeding is a major factor. Of course, operations aren't the only cause of serious loss of blood.

SOMETIMES the small blood vessels are ruptured by infections or improper X-rays. Adrenosem has proved its ability to conserve the life fluid in these cases, too. The internal bleeding which might be caused by the radiation sickness of an atomic war makes the discovery of adrenosem doubly significant.

Years ago, of course, doctors thought they actually benefitted their patient by removing some of their blood. An Eighteenth Century French physician named Guy Patin, for example, once bled himself seven times trying to cure a cold in his head, and in the course of a few days he bled his son 20 times!

Today we know that to waste this precious fluid is to flirt with death. And substances such as adrenosem rightfully take credit for saving many a human life.

Frisco Stingy With Points In College Play

Dons May Gain Berth In NCAA Tourney By High Defense Average

The Associated Press

While college basketball rambles along in what may be its most prolific scoring season—with 100-plus game totals popping up all over—the lads who bump into San Francisco are having a tough time getting 50 points. And that stingy treatment may lead the Dons into the NCAA title tournament as an at-large representative.

The Dons, ranked fifth in this week's Associated Press poll, shackled Santa Clara by a 54-44 count last night for their 11th victory in 12 games and their ninth straight. The lean Santa Clara point production chopped San Francisco's nation leading team defense average to a scant 47.9 allowance a game.

San Francisco, which lost to UCLA 47-40 but reversed it with a 56-44 triumph, went into a seven-minute stall against Santa Clara to the close of the California Basketball Assn. game. Kenny Sears—who has starred for Santa Clara in three NCAA playoffs—was high with 17 points.

Only four other teams ranked among the nation's top 20 were in action—and two of them were knocked off. LaSalle (No. 4) had a rough second half, but finally defeated Muhlenberg 88-79, while George Washington (No. 8) was sending William and Mary to its first Southern Conference defeat 79-65 with Corky Devlin canning 29 points for the Colonials.

Thrice-beaten Cincinnati trounced Dayton (No. 12) 85-78 and Louisville, tied for 20th with Auburn, dropped a home court decision to remarkable Marquette 82-78. It was Marquette's 12th straight victory after an opening defeat.

The LaSalle game had a couple of surprises. First, the Mules moved ahead of the Explorers early in the second half and only a zone defense and some clutch shooting by Alonzo Lewis regained the lead for LaSalle. The second surprise was that Lewis, with 24 points, took the scoring honors away from AllAmerica Tom Gola, who scored 23 along with teammate Charlie Singley for LaSalle.

Duke's Ron Mayer was stopped with seven points before fouling out midway in the second half, but substitute forward Kerky Lamley hit for 20 as the Blue Devils defeated South Carolina 82-64 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Hometown Fetes Ameche Family

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — "The Horse" who carried Wisconsin's football fortunes for four years got a ride himself last night.

Alan Ameche, the Badgers' All-America fullback and the greatest ground gainer in collegiate football history, came home to a banquet in his honor perched on a fire engine at the head of a motorcade. With him were his older son, Brian, just under two, and his wife, Yvonne.

The noisy ride through the streets of his hometown (young Brian enjoyed the screaming sirens more than anybody) was only a prelude, though, to a lucrative evening. By the time it was over the Ameches had netted something like $6,000 in cash and assorted gifts, including a Palomino horse and the title to a brand new automobile.

Two PCL Leaders Play Away; Game At Monroe Homecoming

Pickaway County's two league leaders, Scioto and Ashville, will find themselves up against some tough competition Friday night.

Scioto's Buffaloes, which upset previously undefeated Williamsport last Friday, travel to Pickaway. The Pirates, who have only won two league games, have been improving steadily. With the game being played at Pickaway, the outcome is somewhat in doubt.

Ashville's Broncos gallop up to Five Points to meet Monroe. The Indians, although recording one lone victory in league play, have put up some tough battles. Those who underestimate Monroe may find themselves on the short end of the score when the game is over.

Atlanta's Red Raiders, featuring the high scoring Buzz Gerhardt, play host to Walnut's Tigers. The Tigers are still seeking their first win. Last week, they led Jackson for three quarters before running out of gas.

THE TROJANS OF DARBY, a quintet never to be counted out, play host to New Holland. Darby has had some tough breaks. But even when the Trojans had a 2-3 record, before last week, they had outscored their competition — a very interesting fact to be remembered.

The Warriors of Saltcreek travel to Jackson. The Warriors put up a fine fight against the high scoring Atlanta squad, going down 83 to 72. The Wildcats had to come in from left field to beat Walnut in their last outing.

In an interesting Fairfield County battle, Stoutsville plays host to Amanda. The two quintets will be carrying on their traditional rivalry.

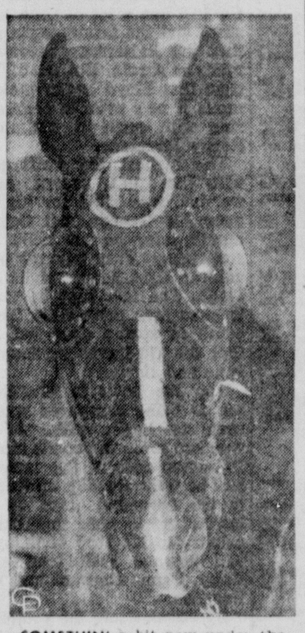

The Ashville-Monroe contest will be the homecoming tilt for the Indians. Vonna Bach will reign as queen.

Her three attendants will be: Roberta Lightle, a junior; Carolyn Mowery, a sophomore; and Audrey Blair, a freshman.

A dance will follow the game.

College Grid Play To Be More Honest

NEW YORK (AP)—Football will be more honest next fall if the wishes of the NCAA Rules Committee are respected.

Winding up 2 days of deliberations, the committee yesterday adopted six changes in the rules and made two strong appeals to coaches for more honest and careful observance of other rules.

The most important change was in the substitution rule, a short step backward from the "no platoon" rule adopted two years ago. This will permit any player who starts a quarter to leave the game and re-entered once during that quarter. Collaterally, the four-minute "segment" in the second and fourth quarters was eliminated.

The "hideout" was ruled out by a provision that when the ball is spotted and declared ready for play, every offensive player must be within 15 yards of it. On the "tackle eligible" pass, no offensive player may be stationed outside the lineman who becomes eligible.

The "holder" on a place kick now is permitted to rise and run with the ball, pass or kick it. This will keep the defense from rushing too enthusiastically and also eliminate a difficult call when the "holder" raised his knee from the ground for a fake play.

Two minor changes were eliminating the "wig-wag" requirement in the fair catch signal and authorizing the use of shoe cleats with rounded ends.

Furman Streaks To Scoring Title

NEW YORK (AP)—Furman, an old hand at high scoring team assaults, vaulted into the lead this week in offense statistics among the nation's major college basketball teams.

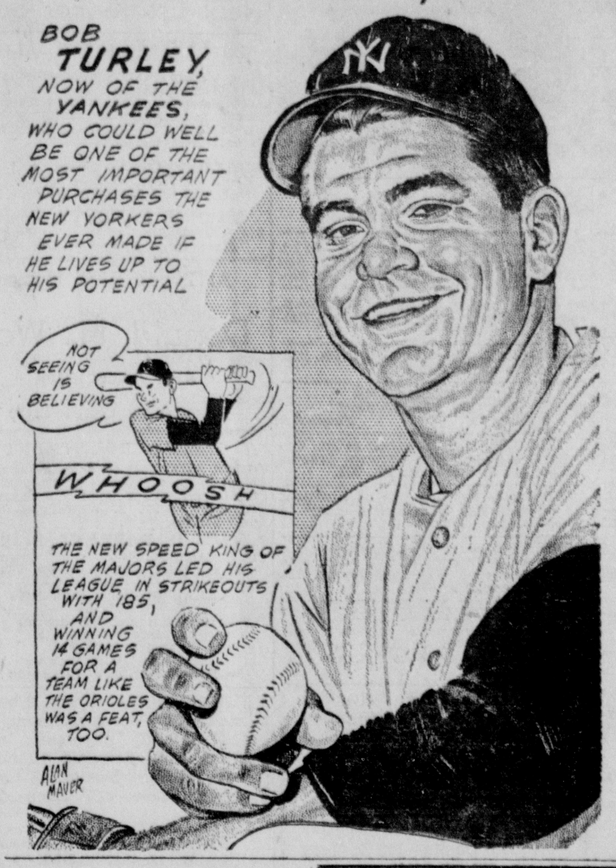

Two 100-point-plus sprees, one an all-time single game record, sent Furman spiraling into first place in pursuit of its third scoring title.

Furman's 154-67 mauling of The Citadel capped the Paladins' rise to an average of 99.2. Furman also had a 102-85 trouncing of Erskine in the records through the streak—as well as a 105-81 reversal by North Carolina State which helped boost the Wolfpack, No. 2 team in this week's Associated Press poll, from 17th to 7th.

Coyote Attacks Oklahoma Woman

OKLAHOMA CITY, (AP)—Cormack P. Hearn, employed at Tinker Air Force Base here, thought his wife was kidding when she telephoned him at work and said frantically: 'I've been attacked by a wolf."

Hearn hurried home. His wife was telling the truth — at least basically. He found a coyote in his front yard.

He killed the animal with a shotgun borrowed from a neighbor. His wife told him she went outside to 'investigate a noise like an animal" and was attacked and bitten on the leg.

The wound was not serious. Mrs. Hearn was given antirabies shots.

Is Excess Fat A Disease?

It might be well to consider excess weight a disease. It is frequently classed as the number one killer of the 20th century. If you suffer the social and physical handicaps of being overweight you must read this letter from Mrs. Ralph Pepiot, R.R. 1, Houston, Ohio. She writes: "As long as I live I will recommend Rennel Concentrate to every overweight person that I know. When I started taking Rennel I weighed 164 lbs. In the few weeks that I have been taking Rennel I have lost 25 lbs. I have never felt better since losing this needless ugly fat, and I look much better, too."

Thousands of others have overcome the social and physical discomfort of being overweight with this effective home recipe. It's easy—no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your druggist and ask for four ounces of liquid Rennel Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Then take two tablespoonfuls twice a day. That's all there is to it. No diets to complicate your meal planning. No expensive vitamins to fortify your system from weakness while going without food for you can eat normally. If the very first bottle doesn't show the simple easy way to lose pounds of bulky fat and help regain slender, more youthful curves — if reducible excess fat doesn't seem to disappear almost like magic just return the empty bottle to the manufacturer for your money back. Insist on and be sure to get Rennel.

Promising Patterson Slow Putting On Heavy Weight

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — It behooves Floyd Patterson to begin putting on some solid weight pretty soon now if the dazzling young boxer from Brooklyn is to live up to the gaudy promises of those who have been saying for the past several years that he can't miss winning the heavyweight title.

The "new Joe Louis" weighed only 166 pounds the other night when he bombed middleweight Willie Troy into submission before a national audience. While it was a very impressive performance in every respect, the fact remained that Patterson was fighting at only a little more than he scaled when he swept the 165-pound championships in the 1952 Olympic Games at Helsinki.

That strikes this corner as slow progress in the weight department, even if the lad has just turned 20. He still has a lot of time to grow, sure, and the family record shows that the Pattersons become large men, as a rule. But it still is high time that Floyd began making his move if he's ever to belong in the ring with such a champion as Rocky Marciano.

The highest the swift puncher with the 19-1 record has yet weighed was 170½ for his victory over Joe Gannon last Oct. 22. A month later he hit 169¼ for his surprisingly easy triumph over the veteran light heavyweight Jimmie Slade. The fact that he was able to shed four pounds for Troy and come in strong does not suggest that the 170 figure represented all bone and sinew.

The Joe Louis to whom Patterson is being compared was a big man to begin with. At 20 he weighed some 15 pounds more than Patterson does at the same stage, and he went steadily up from there to the 200-pound class. It also is interesting to note that before he celebrated his 22nd birthday Louis had stopped such men as Max Baier, Primo Carnera and Paulino Uzcuden.

By comparison, the youthful phenom from Brooklyn finds himself in an awkward spot. He's too big for the middleweight division, in which considerable money can be made, and he's not yet nearly experienced enough to mess with the likes of Archie Moore, the ruler of the 175-pounders. He's got to pull himself up to that table and start eating heavy if he's ever to reach the high income brackets.

Goodwin To Head Pacific Baseball

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Claire V. Goodwin, a one-time second baseman who wants the challenge more than the money, is the new president of the Pacific Coast League.

The unanimous selection of the 59-year-old vice president of Lucky Stores, Inc., was announced yesterday.

"I took the office as a challenge," he said.

"There is a lot of missionary work to be done. I'll go out and meet the people."

Goodwin succeeds Clarence (Pants) Rowland, who quit to join the Chicago Cubs executive staff.

Mickey Owen Gets Release From Sox

BOSTON (AP) — One of the most colorful and varied careers as an active player has ended with the unconditional release of catcher Mickey Owen by the Red Sox.

However, the Sox have given Mickey a contract as a coach for the 1955 season.

Owen thus concludes 20 years as a player in professional baseball. He probably will be working in the bull pen when the season opens.

Mims Angered As Decision Goes To Rocky

CLEVELAND (AP)—Rocky Castellani's unanimous decision over Holly Mims last night almost carried over into a dressing room rematch as Mims and his entourage burst into the winner's quarters screaming "we wuz robbed."

Castellani had been lounging in his robe. His eyes widened in surprise, and then he lunged to his feet, fists clenched, and muttered in flat, cold tones:

"I'll show 'em who won it."

Quick grabs by Castellani's trainers stopped what might very well have become a free-for-all, out of sight of the 5,348 fans in the arena and the television viewers who watched the 12-round bout.

Mims, along with his manager Nick Trottao and his trainers, claimed that Castellani butted him in the clinches and rubbed him on the ropes.

Castellani's manager Al Naiman said later the rhubarb "was only the result of the heat of battle, and disappointment."

"They didn't really mean it. Everything's ironed out now. Everybody's happy."

Crosby Clambake Worth $15,000

More than 250 professional and amateur players are on deck for the 54-hole event, one that is designated the Crosby Clambake.

On hand are the nation's top pros and a wealth of amateurs, most of them more famous as personalities rather than golfers. It appears you get invited to this Crosby party if either you play a top game, entertain, or have no less than three $5,000 automobiles.

Freeman Continues To Pace Scorers

CHICAGO (AP)—Ohio State's Robin Freeman is averaging 10 points per game better than the all-time Big Ten scoring pace set by Don Schlundt of Indiana.

Official Big Ten statistics today showed Freeman with a 37-point average in two league games. Schlundt, who is second in scoring with a 31.3 average in three games, set the Big Ten record average of 27.1 last year.

The lofty Hoosier continues to increase his career scoring record as he starts his fourth season. It is now expanded to 1,176, far ahead of the old mark of 1,027 by Ohio State's Paul Ebert.

Saddler Agrees To Defend Title

Saddler hasn't given anybody a crack at the crown since the September night in 1951 when Willie Pep "quit" in the other corner, a ninth-round TKO victim. Of course, Sandy was in the Army for two years and didn't get out until last April.

Davis, veteran of 107 fights with a 58-47-2 record, is 31. three years older than the champion, who has a gaudy 137-12-2 career mark.

Relief Costs In County Jump $18,000 From 1953 To 1954

Increase Noted In Number Of Cases Handled

Various Conditions Held Responsible For Added Costs

Pickaway County relief costs jumped approximately $18,000 annual in 1954 as compared with 1953.

Figures released by Miss Pauline Roese, director of public assistance for the county, show in 1954, $75,491.70 was spent for 1,318 relief cases. During 1953, the figure was $57,399.14 for 998 cases.

Miss Roese said the rise was not unusual. She noted that almost all other counties in the state showed an increase in the number of relief cases. However, she added, Pickaway County is a little above average.

During 1954, the 1,318 cases represented 3,927 people or an average of 2.97 persons per case. In 1953, the 998 cases accounted for 2,351 people, an average of 2.35 persons per case.

OF THE TOTAL NUMBER of people cared for under the relief program here, an additional 249 in 1954 and 201 in 1953 were classified at medical care cases only. The original figures included home care with hospital and medical care.

Another increase was noted in the money spent for medical and hospital care only. In 1954, this amounted to $24,073.76 while in 1953 it was $19,956.77.

The total costs spent for relief in the county include home, hospital and medical care plus administration. Home care takes care of only necessities such as food, rent, fuel, utilities, clothing, etc.

Miss Roese pointed out that all money for county relief comes only from public utilities excise taxes. The state matches this amount to make up the allowance for county relief.

"No direct county money is used," Miss Roese remarked. "This includes money in the general fund. Many people do not realize this fact."

ALTHOUGH THERE ARE a few chronic reliefers, Miss Roese explained, most people are anxious to get back on their own feet. For the most part, these people need help in getting over a "rough spot".

For example, more than just a few workers are very much affected by season work in construction and canning factories, just to name two. Also, there are some who are only capable of certain types of work.

Miss Roese detailed a number of cases to show her point. One concerned a man with three children, whose wife is expecting a fourth, who cannot hold even the simplest of jobs for more than a couple of weeks.

Another case concerns that of a man who was apprehended for breaking and entering. The man and his wife had two children. Although he is in his late teens, he has the mentality of a 9 1-2 year old child.

Although these people could do certain kinds of work, they are definitely limited. And yet, they have families to support.

MENTALITY is not always a factor. There is the case of a farmer, tending some acreage for $27.50 a week. Although the land lord gave him a tiny house, the money is hardly enough to keep him, his wife and their children.

When it comes to farming, there are many who get paid only for the days that they work. When the weather is bad, there is no work—and no pay.

Miss Roese explained that applicants are screened very thoroughly. One reason for the success of the relief program in Pickaway County, she noted, is that no cash grants are given out.

In certain areas where actual cash is given out, chronic reliefers tend to spring up. Money received is rarely used for it. intended purpose and sometimes is consumed at the local tavern.

In order to further help those who really need aid, Miss Roese pointed out that strict budgets are worked out to make what little money there is go the furthest.

There is always hope for those who need it, she concluded.

Ohioan Sentenced In Hoosier Theft

VINCENNES, Ind. (AP)—Carl McMahon, 25, of Portsmouth, Ohio, pleaded guilty yesterday to burglary in the recent $2,500 robbery of a Vincennes supermart.

He received a two-to-five year sentence in the Indiana Reformatory. McMahon and five other men were rarested here last week after a series of robberies in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois.

Parkersburg Opens Memorial Bridge

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. (AP)—Parkersburg dedicated its $6 million memorial bridge yesterday.

Ceremonies opened the mile and a quarter span across the Ohio River to Belpre, Ohio.

Construction of the bridge began 22 months ago and, although the city of Parkersburg considers itself "sponsor" of the project, it was financed with private capital through the sale of revenue bonds.

Dedicated as a memorial to war veterans from the Parkersburg area, the bridge at present is not part of a main highway system, although officials say state or federal roads eventually may use it.

Jury Nearly Set For Jackson Trial

JACKSON (AP)—Selection of an alternate juror today will complete the panel in the trial of Jackson County Sheriff David L. Trago, being tried on one of 17 indictments on moral charges.

Pickaway County Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff of Circleville, sitting by assignment, swore in a jury of seven men and five women late yesterday. Judge Radcliff replaces Common Pleas Judge James E. Kinnison, who stepped down for the Trago trial.

Approximately one-third of the area of the United States is classified as forest.

Telephone Slugs Bring Trouble

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Tom Patton Williams, 23, told Federal Judge T. Whitfield Davidson he used 51 washers the size of 25-cent coins to make long-distance telephone calls to his girl friend.

She lives in California and her last name is Love, Williams said.

Dayton Preacher Freed By Jury

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—A circuit court jury here yesterday acquitted Cardell E. Hackler, 34, assistant pastor of the International Holiness Tabernacle, Dayton, Ohio.
